

priations made for that department this year be materially increased in the expenditures for 1916. An additional sum of at least $500,000 should be devoted during 1916 to the establishment of schools throughout the regions inhabited by Mohammedan and pagan peoples.

The public treasury is already strained to the utmost by the appropriations for education in the Philippines; approximately 21½ per cent of the revenues of 1914 were spent for purposes of education. It seems probable that the proportionate limit of expenditures for that purpose is reached. In consideration of the many other public improvements so justly demanded by the people. The greatest interest and enthusiasm in public education is shown by all classes of persons in these islands, and at times it seems almost impossible for the Government to meet the demands upon its resources for this purpose. It can hardly be expected that any Government should spend more than one-fifth of its revenues for the purpose of education, and yet a large number of children in the Philippines are at the present time unable to attend the public schools through lack of facilities. The number of pupils in the public schools to-day is 500,000. At this time last year it was 495,000; in 1913, 492,000; and in 1912, 341,000. In spite of the fact that an increasingly large number of children is obtaining admittance to the public schools, I invite your cooperation in an effort to solve the question along permanent lines. The problem is how to adapt our resources to the present situation. Every child in the Philippines is entitled to a primary education from the Government; in fact, the only safe foundation for a democratic form of government is universal primary education. Every citizen of a State who knows how to read and write is better qualified to protect his own rights and can decide for himself how to vote upon public questions presented to him or to her. It should be regarded, therefore, as a fundamental principle in free government that the State owes to its citizens the right to a primary education. The only great and enduring democracies of the modern world are founded upon that principle. It should, therefore, be our purpose to devote an ever-increasing proportion of the expenditures for educational purposes to that end. In order that the people of any locality in the islands may establish additional free institutions for higher education, the legislature should give them greater power to tax themselves for that special purpose.

Very great interest is shown by the legislature in the extension of the excellent sanitary system of the city of Manila to the Provinces, and full support should be given to the plan for provincial sanitary commissions advocated by the Philippine health service; wherever possible, provincial hospitals should be constructed and encouragement afforded for the further extension of dispensaries to the more remote regions. Study and systematic investigation of the problem of the care of the insane in the islands is also recommended, with a view to establishing here an institution which shall afford proper care for those unfortunate people. Further scientific investigation of the causes and possible cure of leprosy should be instituted by the legislature. It is believed that the Philippine Government already occupies a permanent place in the estimation of the scientific world by its handling of this problem.

Attention is invited to the excellent and economic administration of the finances of the city of Manila by the municipal board, but you are again requested to consider the necessity for the passage of a law providing for special assessments upon the owners of property benefited by the extension of much-needed public works in the city.

In the executive branch of this government plans are under contemplation for a further extension of the efficiency system already adopted in many of the modern mercantile houses of the United States. This system is now in operation in certain of the bureaus, and its adoption in the others is being earnestly pressed. While very great economies have been effected in the bureau expenditures in the past two years, additional efforts in that direction will further promote the efficiency of the government.

It is my pleasant duty once more to comment upon the harmony existing between the two houses of the legislature and between the legislative and executive branches of the government. All elements of this government are working with efficiency and in serious cooperation, and each unit may take pride in the successful progress of the Philippine people to more complete and well-merited self-government.

I again urge upon you the prompt consideration of the appropriation bill for the ensuing year, and wish for you the same success as has been attained during the past two years.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Out of order, the following bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

DEATH OF ASSOCIATE JUSTICE LAMAR.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, I desire to announce to the Senate the death of Associate Justice Joseph Rucker Lamar, of the Supreme Court of the United States, a distinguished citizen of Georgia and a distinguished jurist, whose life and character and great public services have been a credit to the State, the Nation, and the judiciary. As a mark of respect to his memory, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 5, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 4, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our Heavenly Father, Source of life and thought and action, through the dispensation of whose providence time sweeps on with ceaseless energy! Another year has passed with its predecessors into history. A new year has dawned upon us, with its hopes and possibilities, its duties and responsibilities. May the accumulated knowledge, wisdom, and achievements of the past be stepping-stones to larger life, clearer perceptions, and nobler achievements, that with ever-growing faith in the eternal verities and the values which make for righteousness in the soul we may march forward with firm steps and ever-brightening hopes to that goal for which every true man and every honest nation longs.

Our hearts, O God our Father, are profoundly moved by the death of a member of the Supreme Court. In his going the Republic loses one of its able jurists, the world a noble man, his friends and family a tender, loving heart. Comfort them, we beseech Thee, in the eternal truth of the immortality of the soul through Him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me shall never die." Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, December 17, 1915, was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF A MEMBER.

Hon. WILLIAM KENT, a Representative from the State of California, appeared before the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. HICKS] desires to take the oath and desires to affirm.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the credentials.

The credentials were read.

Mr. HICKS appeared before the bar of the House and affirmed.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent, upon request of Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, the Committee on Appropriations was discharged from the further consideration of House joint resolution No. 45, providing for the payment of expenses of an expert in the fur-seal investigation in Alaska, and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON RURAL CREDITS (H. DOC. NO. 494).

Mr. GLASS. Mr. Speaker, the Joint Committee of the Senate and House on Rural Credits, authorized by an act of the last Congress, is prepared to report, and I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent that the report be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] announces that the Joint Committee on Rural Credits is ready to report, and asks unanimous consent to have that report printed in the RECORD.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman state it?

Mr. MANN. Is this report presented in the House or through the basket?

The SPEAKER. No; it is presented through the basket.

Mr. MANN. Of course it will be ordered printed as a House document with proper reference?

The SPEAKER. Inasmuch as the gentleman wanted to ask unanimous consent, I told him to announce what it was. Of course that report goes through the basket. Is there objection to the request to print it in the Record? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the report is referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The report is as follows:

To the Congress:

The Joint Committee on Rural Credits, created by an act of the Sixty-third Congress, has adopted and submits as its report the accompanying report by its Subcommittee on Land-Mortgage Loans, and presents also the draft of a bill to provide a system of land-mortgage credits in the United States under Federal supervision.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON RURAL CREDITS,
Washington, D. C., January 3, 1916.

HON. CARTER GLASS,
Chairman of the Joint Committee on Rural Credits.

DEAR MR. GLASS: I am instructed by the Subcommittee on Land Mortgage Loans to recommend to the full joint committee the accompanying bill, which I have the honor to transmit with the following report:

MODERN FARMING REQUIRES CAPITAL IN LARGE AMOUNTS—THE AMERICAN FARMER HAS THE BEST SECURITY IN THE WORLD, PRODUCTIVE LAND—THIS BILL ENABLES THE FARMER TO OBTAIN CAPITAL FOR PRODUCTIVE PURPOSES AT LOW RATES AND FOR LONG TERMS ON THE SECURITY OF HIS FARM.

NECESSITY FOR FARM CAPITAL.

The successful farmer becomes more of a business man each year. He must use more machinery, buy more fertilizer, and sow better seed. He must erect better buildings, raise better stock, and grow better crops. He must store his produce in order to sell in a high market. He must pay cash in order to buy cheap. If he wishes to keep his children on the farm he must make his home attractive. All of this costs money. He must have ready cash.

DIFFICULTY OF SECURING CAPITAL.

The farmer applies to the nearest bank for a loan and offers his farm as security. The banker makes excuses. He doesn't know the farmer; he doesn't know the value of his farm; he doesn't like to tie his demand deposits up in long-term loans; his commercial customers who carry a substantial line of deposits have the first claim. These excuses are well founded.

There may be additional excuses not so genuine, such as the scarcity of money, the hard hearts of the directors, unusual demands for loans, and the like. If the farmer gets a loan at all, he pays a high rate or he must be subject to foreclosure on short notice. He usually pays some one a large commission; he is subject frequently to substantial renewal fees; he is sometimes compelled to pay taxes on the mortgage as well as on the land; and he finds himself in the power of some hard-headed banker. He can not complain of this; it is the business of a banker to be hard-headed.

USURIOUS RATES OF INTEREST.

In many parts of the country the farmer is charged extortionate and inexcusable rates of interest, regardless of usury laws and a decent regard for human necessities. He has a real grievance here.

DEMAND FOR REASONABLE FACILITIES.

But in spite of his grievance the American farmer does not come to Congress with a hard-luck story. He does not ask the Government to bestow on him the public money that all the people have contributed in taxes. He does not demand that the Government become a banker in order to borrow money on bonds and loan the proceeds to him. He merely calls attention to the fact that farming has become a business, demanding large amounts of capital; he points out the undoubted excellence of the security he offers; and he demands legislation that shall put it in the power of those who are interested and those who have money to invest to extend to him the credit he requires. He desires the Government to authorize a system of land banks which shall duplicate for him the facilities now commanded by men engaged in manufacturing, in transportation, and in commerce.

COMMERCIAL BANKS NOT SUITED TO FARMERS' LONG-TERM NEEDS.

The Federal reserve act passed by the last Congress placed the capstone on a superb structure for commercial credit. It gathers the quick capital of the country into great reservoirs, where it is readily available for the needs of trade. Member banks receive the cash deposits of the Nation, and must be prepared at all times to restore them on demand. They must, therefore, invest these deposits in short-time loans, so that a steady stream of payments is flowing into the banks, giving them a chance to extend or contract their loans in response to the rise and fall in the supply of deposits. It follows that a commercial bank ought not to make many loans for longer periods than it takes to carry through the ordinary commercial transaction.

An effort was made, however, to extend accommodation to the farmer through the Federal reserve act. National banks were encouraged to make personal loans to farmers for periods of six months and were to a limited extent permitted to loan on improved farm lands for periods not exceeding five years; but your subcommittee is convinced that loans must be made available to farmers on long-term mortgage security through some medium other than the commercial bank.

We have seen that the commercial bank has a valid claim to demand deposits. This leaves for our consideration savings or time deposits and money seeking long-term investment.

TIME DEPOSITS NOT AVAILABLE FOR LONG-TERM MORTGAGE.

The ordinary time deposit may be withdrawn on 30 or 60 days' notice. It is therefore not properly invested in long-term mortgages. Short-term mortgages or long-term personal credits are more appropriate. Even the mutual savings banks of the East, with their vast resources, will not place a large percentage of their funds in farm mortgages. They dislike to loan on farm mortgages at all, and when they do make such loans they insist upon a demand note or a note due in six months at best. It is fair to say, however, that such notes are often allowed to run indefinitely after they are due, but the farmer is in constant dread that he will be compelled to pay at an inconvenient time.

MONEY SEEKING LONG-TERM INVESTMENT.

Of money seeking long-term investment at low rates there is an abundant supply. It includes the ordinary savings of the school-teacher, clerk, minister, and wage earner; the proceeds of life insurance in the hands of widows and other beneficiaries; funds belonging to estates, minors, and wards in chancery in the hands of executors, guardians, and trustees; funds of insurance companies, benevolent orders, and societies of various kinds; endowments of colleges, hospitals, museums, and other institutions; and assets to be invested by receivers, courts, and governments. The aggregate of these is enormous. They require an investment that is absolutely safe and reasonably liquid in the sense that it may be converted into cash upon moderate notice; in other words, that it may find a ready market. A safe investment of this character need not carry a high rate of interest.

INVESTOR AND FARMER BROUGHT TOGETHER FOR MUTUAL PROFIT.

Here we discover the funds that should be made available to the farmer on long-term mortgage. We may picture the owners of this vast wealth grouped on one side of a river, the farmers desiring loans grouped on the other side. It is evident that each has what the other wants. We are asked to furnish the bridge which shall bring them in touch or, rather, to grant a franchise to those who will build the bridge if we will construct the approaches. Such we conceive to be a proper function of the Government.

It is evident that the school-teacher in Vermont, with $500 to invest, can not be sure that the Kansas farm mortgage offered her is a sound investment. The title of the mortgagor may be defective; the farmer may be improvident; the land may not be productive. She has no way to ascertain these primary facts. But if she is able to buy a long-term bond, with semiannual coupons sure to be promptly paid, secured in common with thousands of like bonds on millions of dollars' worth of farm lands, guaranteed by 12 banks with an aggregate capital of not less than six millions, with selected borrowers of known character, with titles examined and all details attended to by trained men, and with Government examination and supervision, she may invest with confidence on a moderate-income basis.

A bond of this character would be safer than a savings-bank deposit, and it would bring a higher return than savings banks average. It has been the aim of your subcommittee to devise a system of land banks which shall bring the investor and the farmer together for mutual profit at a moderate cost through the medium of such a bond.

PRIMARY CONSIDERATIONS.

The primary considerations in devising such a system are:

1. Absolute safety and attractive income to the investor.
2. Low interest rates, long-term mortgages, and amortization payments for the farmer.
3. Low cost of administration.
4. Simplicity of organization and operation.
5. Adaptability to every part of the country.
6. Stimulation to the cooperative spirit.

These details will be discussed after a general description of the plan.

GENERAL PLAN.

Government control of the system is assured by the creation of a Federal farm loan board, independent and nonpartisan, consisting of five members, appointed by the President for terms of 10 years each and paid from the Public Treasury. (Sec. 3.)

TWELVE LAND BANKS.

Loans are made to farmers by 12 or more Federal land banks, each operating in a separate district and having a capital of not less than $500,000. If the full amount is not subscribed from private sources, the Government subscribes for as much as may be necessary to make up the required amount. Provision is made for returning the Government subscription after the land banks are firmly established. (Secs. 4 and 5.)

LOCAL ASSOCIATIONS.

In order to secure intimate touch with the borrowers it is provided that the land bank shall make loans to farmers through local associations of borrowers, called national farm loan associations. These associations do not conduct a banking business. Their operations are very simple. They admit members who desire to borrow; their directors and loan committees pass on the value of the security and the character of the borrower. Every borrower takes stock in the farm loan association to the amount of 5 per cent of the face of his loan. This amount is subscribed by the association to the stock of the land bank, thus providing for a capital proportionate to the amount of loans, approximating 1 to 20. (Secs. 7 and 8.)

LIMITED OR UNLIMITED LIABILITY.

The farm loan associations may be of limited liability or of unlimited liability. In the former each member is liable for the debts of the association in an amount equal to the face of his subscribed stock; in the latter the member undertakes unlimited liability for all the debts of the association. This individual liability gives to the indorsement of the association solid financial backing. The bill provides that all loans shall be indorsed by the association of which the borrower is a member. (Secs. 9 to 12.)

We thus have a mortgage loan secured by productive farm land indorsed by a farm loan association. The loan indorsed by a farm loan association, with unlimited liability on the part of its members, will naturally have a better standing than loans indorsed by an association in which the liability is limited. Each land bank will keep the two classes of mortgages separate. (Sec. 16.)

FARM LOAN BONDS SECURED BY MORTGAGES.

When the land bank has a substantial amount of either kind of mortgages on hand, not less than $50,000, it may issue a like amount of farm loan bonds based on the mortgages as collateral security. Every farm loan bond limited is secured by all the farm mortgages held by the land bank on which there is limited liability of the local members; every farm loan bond unlimited is secured by all the mortgages held by the land bank on which there is unlimited liability of the local members. Because of the unlimited liability the latter bonds should be sold on a more favorable basis than the former. (Secs. 16, 22-26.)

Every Federal land bank guarantees the payment of every bond and coupon issued by every other Federal land bank. This gives them a broad insurance. (Sec. 25.)

EXPENSES AND PROFITS.

The land banks are permitted to charge borrowers 1 per cent more for interest than they pay bondholders. For example, if the current rate on farm loan bonds is 4 per cent, the bank may charge not to exceed 5 per cent to farmers who borrow. This margin of 1 per cent on the amount of unpaid principal outstanding is available to the bank for its expenses and earnings, but it will probably be largely reduced in practice. The profits go to the local associations in the form of dividends on stock of the land bank held by the associations, and reach the borrowers in the form of dividends on stock held by them in the associations. In this way the earnings of the system go to the borrowers and its cooperative character is assured. If the 1 per cent margin is too high no harm is done, for the excess comes back to the borrower in dividends. (Sec. 13.)

Such is the general plan of the system which we recommend. Coming now to the details of the bill, we shall first speak of the farm loan bonds as an attractive investment.

STRENGTH OF THE BONDS.

It is obvious that the first requisite of a long-term bond bearing a low rate of interest is its security. Every reasonable safeguard is provided in the bill.

RESTRICTIONS ON MORTGAGES.

The mortgages which stand as security back of the bonds are carefully restricted.

No bank may loan on land outside its district.

Every mortgage deposited as security is on the amortization plan, so that part of the principal is paid up every six months.

The money must be borrowed for productive purposes, for the purchase of a farm for a home, or to liquidate existing indebtedness.

No loan shall exceed 50 per cent of the appraised value of the mortgaged land.

The borrower must engage in the cultivation of the farm mortgaged. The maximum of loans to one borrower is limited to $10,000.

The purpose for which the loan is obtained must be stated.

The loan becomes due and payable upon breach of any condition of the mortgage. Section 12.

APPRAISAL.

Every application for a loan must be passed upon by the loan committee of the local association, who shall make a detailed written report, signed by all three members, giving the appraisal of the land as determined by them. The directors and the loan committee must approve the loan, the latter unanimously, before it is recommended to the land bank. The application and the report of the loan committee go to the land bank.

The land bank must refer the application and the report of the loan committee to one or more of the land-bank appraisers for the district. These appraisers are public officials appointed by the Federal farm loan board. (Section 3.) They have no inducement to make an excessive appraisal. It is their duty to make a careful and impartial written report, and no loan may be made unless their report is favorable. The directors of the land bank must then decide whether or not to make the loan.

Every application thus runs the gantlet of the local loan committee, the local board of directors, the land-bank appraisers, and the land-bank directors.

Whenever mortgages are put up as security for the issue of farm-loan bonds, they are referred by the farm-loan board to special appraisers for further appraisal and examination. Section 20.

SECURITY OF BONDS.

Every farm-loan bond is secured as follows:

1. By the capital, reserves, and earnings of the land bank which issues it.

2. By the capital, reserves, and earnings of the 11 other land banks.

3. By the collective security of all the mortgages in its division (limited or unlimited) of the land bank, the mortgages pledged being at least equal in amount to the outstanding bonds.

Every mortgage pledged as collateral is secured as follows:

1. By the personal undertaking of the borrower.

2. By the security of the mortgaged land at least double in value to the amount of the loan.

3. By the capital, reserves, and earnings of the local association indorsing the loan.

4. By the individual liability of the members of the indorsing association.

ATTRACTIVENESS OF THE BONDS AS AN INVESTMENT.

A bond of the undoubted security possessed by the farm-loan bonds above described should prove a most attractive investment. Since all the bonds are guaranteed by all the land banks, they should sell on practically the same basis throughout the country. And it is not too much to expect them to sell on a 4 per cent basis. In such case the farmer would get his loans at 5 per cent.

An absolutely safe investment, with interest payable semiannually on a 4 per cent basis, should be able to compete with other long-term investments or savings banks on its merits.

TAX EXEMPTION.

It is proposed, however, to make these bonds and the income derived therefrom exempt from all Federal, State, and local taxation. This exemption should place them ahead of any bonds bearing the same rate and not enjoying a similar exemption. Section 30.

INVESTMENT IN FARM-LOAN BONDS.

Farm-loan bonds are also made a lawful investment for all fiduciary and trust funds and may be accepted as security for all public deposits. They may also be purchased by member banks of the Federal Reserve System. Section 31.

INTEREST RATES TO FARMERS.

Present interest rates to farmers are so confused with commissions, fees, and charges of various sorts that it is difficult to ascertain the total cost of money on farm mortgages. Dr. C. W. Thompson, specialist in charge of Rural Organization in the Department of Agriculture, reports that the average rate varies from 5.3 per cent in New Hampshire to 9 per cent and even 10 per cent in certain Southern and Western States, including commissions. As this is the average rate, there must be individual cases running much higher. Testimony before the joint subcommittee of the Senate and House Committees on Banking and Currency in 1914 gave the maximum rate as high as 25 per cent, including commissions and charges.

It is readily seen that a rate as low as 5 per cent, 5½ per cent, or even 6 per cent would be of great benefit to farmers in most sections of the United States.

LONG-TERM MORTGAGES.

Where money is borrowed by farmers to invest as fixed capital in the purchase of a home, in the erection of farm buildings, in the construction of roads, drains, and fences, in the purchase of machinery and stock, or for like purposes, the loan should be paid out over a long period, varying somewhat with the permanence of the investment. At present it is difficult for a farmer to borrow money for a longer period than five years, and with renewals come additional commissions, fees, and charges. Even where it is the policy of banks to allow a loan to run for a long period without demanding payment, they insist upon a demand obligation, so that their funds will not be tied up in case of sudden calls for deposits. This arrangement leaves the farmer in a continual state of uncertainty, as he may be called on to pay in times of financial stress when it may be impossible to obtain funds.

The bill provides, therefore, that loans may be made for long terms, not to exceed 36 years. It is believed that a longer period would not be advisable for the United States, although farm mortgages are made in Europe for periods as long as 75 years.

The reason for fixing upon a maximum period of 36 years is explained in the following section.

AMORTIZATION PAYMENTS.

Ultimate payment of the mortgage debt is as important to the farmer as a low rate of interest. Experience teaches that a borrower is most likely to pay out his loan if he pays in small regular installments at fixed periods.

For example, if the farmer pays 5 per cent interest on his loan, payable semiannually, and with each interest payment pays 1 per cent on the principal of his loan, his debt will be entirely paid off in 36 years. If he pays a larger percentage of his loan with each payment, liquidation of the principal will be correspondingly quicker.

The approved practice is to spread the entire payment over the term of the loan in fixed equal semiannual payments. When the rate of interest is fixed and the borrower decides what percentage of the loan he will undertake to pay off each year the semiannual payments are readily figured. All students of rural credits recommend this feature.

LOW COST OF ADMINISTRATION.

We have already seen that every reasonable effort must be made to make the farm-loan bonds attractive to the investor at low rates and that safety is the prime requisite. It is clear, moreover, that the cost of proper safeguards, such as appraisals, examining titles, and the ordinary overhead charges of a banking business, must be met by the borrower in the form of increased interest charges.

Broadly speaking, large expenditures to insure absolute safety will be reflected in the favorable rates on farm-loan bonds. But there is a point at which expenditure would be out of proportion to the results obtained. In the solution of this problem the subcommittee has been guided by sound banking principles and the experience of similar systems in Europe.

ASSISTANCE FROM BORROWERS.

Everyone must concede the importance of strong land banks, managed by trained bankers, for the purpose of making sound loans and issuing sound bonds. Salaries and expenses comparable to those of a joint-stock bank must be expected in the performance of these essential functions.

But the special capabilities of the land-bank managers must be supplemented by an intimate knowledge of the borrower and his affairs, particularly of the farm land he offers as security. This supplementary knowledge is furnished without additional cost through the local associations.

At the outset we secure the personal interest of the borrower by requiring him to contribute to the capital of the loan association 5 per cent of the face of his loan. This personal stake makes the system mutual and makes the borrower a cooperator. His interest is further secured by his personal liability as a stockholder (double or unlimited, as the case may be). He knows that if the association recommends and indorses a bad loan he may be called on to help make the loan good.

We should thus expect every member to keep careful watch lest his loan association make unsafe loans, with resulting personal loss to him. We should also expect him to see that the best available men in the community act as directors and as members of the loan committee.

As it is the essence of cooperation that the members shall contribute their services, we shall get all this local care, supervision, and personal interest without the payment of fees or salaries. The only salaried official of loan associations will be the secretary-treasurer, and as all the banking business and most of the bookkeeping will be done by the land bank, and as there will be no local office to be kept open for daily business, his remuneration should be small.

We believe the cost of administration will be as low as safety permits.

SIMPLICITY OF ORGANIZATION AND OPERATION.

The purpose is to make the system as simple as is consistent with efficiency and security.

A central board to represent the public seems essential.

Land banks to do the technical banking business can not be dispensed with. This business must be done by some one and paid for. It is not the sort of work that members can contribute gratuitously.

The necessary intimate contact with the farmer is done effectively, directly, and cheaply through local cooperative associations.

Farmers of a given locality apply to the land bank of their district for a charter. The land bank supplies circulars, blanks, and all necessary information. After the charter is granted the land bank makes the loans and the payments are forwarded to it by the local associations. The land banks issue the bonds and get fresh supplies of money to loan to new borrowers.

It is plain that the land banks do the real business of the system. They make the loans and they issue the bonds, but they are under the supervision of the farm-loan board and they command the help of the local associations. The system is simplicity itself.

ADAPTABILITY TO EVERY PART OF THE COUNTRY.

A study of the various European systems discloses three main types of land-mortgage banks:

1. Cooperative banks with unlimited liability.
2. Cooperative banks with limited liability.
3. Joint-stock banks.

COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS.

The reported bill permits farmers to organize local associations with double liability or with unlimited liability. If they will organize mainly on the unlimited plan, they will get lower rates of interest, for mortgages carrying unlimited liability of the borrowers for all debts of the association make the safest basis for farm-loan bonds, and hence would insure fresh supplies of capital at the lowest rates.

Your subcommittee has felt it wise to make either form of cooperative association available for the use of farmers, so that they may make their choice. It is quite possible that an association with limited liability may exist in the same community with an unlimited association.

It has not been difficult to devise a plan under which both classes of cooperative associations may be organized and obtain accommodation for their members through the same land banks, with a segregation of assets, expenses, and earnings. Experience alone will demonstrate which type will be most availed of. One type may appeal more strongly to the farmers of one district, with the contrary result in another district.

JOINT-STOCK BANKS.

In some localities where land values are settled and farmers are accustomed to borrow from mortgage banks it is quite possible that farmers will prefer to obtain mortgage loans from a joint-stock bank operating under a Federal charter, with Federal restrictions and supervision.

Some farmers, moreover, may object to the association with their neighbors in cooperative undertakings; they may not like the publicity and scrutiny that cooperation entails; they may not be able or willing to subscribe 5 per cent of the face of the desired loan to the stock of the local association. Moreover, associations may start slowly in some States, leaving a wide field unoccupied for years.

Provision is therefore made (section 18) for the organization of joint-stock land banks of not less than $250,000 capital, to be privately subscribed. Their operations will be confined to a single State, and they will be permitted to make loans and to issue farm-loan bonds under the supervision of the farm-loan board. Their stockholders will assume double liability. Their capital will be readily available from the outset, and they will thus have certain advantages over cooperative banks in getting their money out on loans. In order, therefore, to equalize to some extent the earning power of the two classes of banks, they are limited in the issue of bonds to 15 times their capital and surplus. The cooperative banks may issue bonds to the amount of 20 times their capital and surplus.

Joint-stock land banks are not permitted to engage in any business but making farm-mortgage loans and issuing bonds. In States with populations exceeding 2,000,000 of people their capital stock must be not less than $500,000. Their bonds are called joint-stock bonds, and must be in such form as to be readily distinguished from bonds issued by Federal (cooperative) land banks. They are given a free hand as to interest rates on loans and bonds, except that the margin for expense and profit must not exceed 1 per cent a year on the principal of outstanding loans. (Sec. 19.)

Provision is thus made for the existence of the three types of mortgage loan. They will be competitors in granting loans and in selling bonds, but they will all be under strict Government supervision. Each type, in order to survive, must prove its usefulness. Your subcommittee feels that there is a field for all three.

LAND-BANK AGENTS.

It is desired that local associations organize in every community at an early date, but it is also recognized that on account of peculiar local conditions some communities may be without local associations or joint-stock land banks indefinitely. The farm-loan board is given power in such cases to authorize Federal land banks to make loans to farmers through duly incorporated trust companies, mortgage companies, or savings institutions.

Such loans would be subject to the conditions of loans made through farm-loan associations, and the borrower would be required to contribute 5 per cent of the face of his loan to the capital of the land bank. The agent would indorse the loan and become responsible for its payment and the collection of interest and amortization installments, receiving such compensation as might be agreed, not to exceed one-half of 1 per cent of the total unpaid amount of the loan. (Sec. 17.)

In this way it is hoped to take advantage of existing institutions in districts which are not otherwise adequately served. It is feared that the formation of cooperative associations would be retarded if the privilege of making loans through agents should be granted too freely. Hence the restriction expressed at the beginning of section 17.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT.

Time or savings deposits stand midway between demand deposits and funds seeking long-term investment, just as the farmer's need for cash to purchase machinery, fertilizer, and live stock stands midway between the commercial loan and the long-term mortgage. Savings deposits should therefore be available to the farmer for long-term personal credit or short-term mortgage credit not to exceed five years.

And since the various land banks will have facilities, as well as the overhead charges, of a regular bank, and since they will have local representatives in the farm-loan associations, it seems wise to give them power to establish savings departments for the handling of time deposits. (Sec. 18.)

The savings department will be kept separate from the other departments of the bank and the capital of the bank will not be liable for the debts of the savings department as long as there are farm-loan bonds outstanding and not satisfied.

This provision is made for two reasons—

1. Because the mutual savings banks of the East have not needed capital to inaugurate or to carry on their business.
2. Because the farm-loan bonds are the vital point in the long-term mortgage system, and their security must not be impaired by diverting any part of the capital.

To make up for the lack of capital in the savings department it is provided that 5 per cent of all time deposits shall be kept on hand in a liquid form as a guaranty fund. The remaining 95 per cent may be invested in five-year farm mortgages subject to call after one year, or in Government bonds, farm-loan bonds, or approved securities.

As a further means of making up for the lack of capital it is provided that all net earnings of the savings department shall go to reserve, so that in a few years this department will be in a very strong position.

The five-year mortgages taken by the savings department are not made eligible as security for farm-loan bonds. (Sec. 18.)

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITARIES.

The land banks are authorized to act as Government depositaries, and are required to act as financial agents of the Government. They thus become instrumentalities of the Federal Government. (Sec. 6.)

RESERVES AND DIVIDENDS.

Farm loan associations and land banks are required to carry semi-annually to reserve account 25 per cent of their net earnings, until the reserves equal 20 per cent of the outstanding capital, and to maintain the reserves at 20 per cent. After the reserves equal the required percentage of the capital stock, 5 per cent of the net earnings must be carried to reserve annually. After the reserve requirements are met, the balance of net earnings is available for dividends. (Secs. 27 and 28.)

STATE LEGISLATION.

It is well understood that the laws in the several States vary as to land titles, registry, exemptions, homestead rights, foreclosure, and equities of redemption. It is therefore made the duty of the farm loan board to investigate these questions in each State, and to declare mortgages ineligible as security for farm-loan bonds in those States where the laws do not give adequate protection to those loaning on first mortgage. Very few, if any, States will fall within this rule, and they will doubtless amend their laws promptly in order to bring the benefits of the farm-loan system within reach of their citizens. (Sec. 32.)

OTHER PROVISIONS.

There are other important provisions of the proposed bill which need no discussion here, notably those concerning defaulted loans (sec. 29), examinations (sec. 33), penalties for accepting gifts, bonuses, or commissions, for giving false information, for embezzlement, for counterfeiting, etc. (sec. 24), dissolutions of loan associations and land banks (sec. 35), and appointment of receivers (sec. 25).

STIMULATING THE COOPERATIVE SPIRIT.

The rapid increase of tenant farmers and the tendency to abandon agriculture and seek the larger centers of population has become a national menace in this country as well as in Europe. It increases the cost of living and causes a one-sided development. Most civilized nations are already offering direct aid and other inducements to persuade the people back to the land. We believe that the United States can well afford the moderate encouragement provided in this bill.

Much has been accomplished in Europe by legislation that encourages cooperation. There are societies to organize cooperative institutions, lecturers who go about to spread the cooperative gospel, and training schools for boys, girls, and adults. There are laws establishing systems of personal rural credits as well as land-mortgage systems. There are cooperative buying, cooperative selling, cooperative creameries, markets, breeding establishments, insurance companies, and the like. These are all important, especially personal credits.

Our country lags far behind Europe in most matters of cooperation among farmers. There are conditions which render it more difficult here than in older countries. But so far as cooperation is applicable, and as speedily as we can adapt it to our own conditions, it should be established.

The framers of this bill realize that it is but one factor in the vast field for national cooperation that lies before the American farmer. But they entertain the hope that organization for the purpose of securing land-mortgage credit will bring neighboring farmers into closer touch all over the Union and will stimulate the cooperative spirit. Those men who organize farm-loan associations will become better acquainted and more trustful of each other, so that it will be comparatively easy to form organizations among the land-mortgage groups for personal-credit unions and various forms of cooperative activity.

In this connection we desire to acknowledge the debt we owe to those pioneers who have awakened the interest of the American people in rural credits. Largely through the efforts of Senator FLETCHER, of Florida, the American Commission and the United States Commission went to Europe in 1913 and gathered the information and evidence contained in Senate Document No. 214, Sixty-third Congress, first session, entitled "Agricultural Cooperation and Rural Credit in Europe."

Senator FLETCHER was chairman of both commissions. Mr. Moss of Indiana, a member of the present joint committee and chairman of the subcommittee on personal rural credits, was an influential member of both commissions. Senator FLETCHER was unanimously invited to sit with the present joint committee in its deliberations. He has given much help and wise counsel to your subcommittee on frequent occasions. Members of the subcommittee on personal rural credits, particularly Mr. Moss, Mr. HAWLEY, and Senator HOKES SMITH, have given most valuable assistance to the land-mortgage division.

SUMMARY.

It is believed that the system of land banks outlined in the proposed bill affords a safe and attractive farm-loan bond for the investing public—low interest rates, long-term mortgages, and easy payments for the farmers; low cost of administration; simplicity of organization and operation; adaptability to the needs of every section; and stimulation to the spirit of generous cooperation among farmers.

HENRY F. HOLLIS,

Chairman for the Subcommittee on Land Mortgage Loans.

Members of the subcommittee on land mortgage loans: Senator HOLLIS, of New Hampshire, chairman; Senator GORE, of Oklahoma; Senator NELSON, of Minnesota; Mr. GLASS, of Virginia; Mr. PHELAN, of Massachusetts; Mr. LEVER, of South Carolina; Mr. HAYES, of California.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk be immediately considered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution extending the time for filing an additional report of the joint committee of Congress to investigate rural credits.

Resolved, etc., That the time of the joint committee of the two Houses of Congress appointed pursuant to an act of Congress, approved March 4, 1915, be, and is hereby, extended for four months from the passage hereof, in which to file an additional report as required by the said act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution just reported?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is the reason for it?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. Speaker, I will state to the House that the report submitted from the Joint Committee on Rural Credits relates exclusively to land-mortgage loans. This request for additional extension relates to personal rural-credit loans. There are two subcommittees, one considering land-credit loans and the other considering personal credit loans. The report submitted this morning relates altogether to the establishment of land banks, and the committee having under consideration personal rural credits asks for further time in which to report.

Mr. MANN. I shall not object, Mr. Speaker, although I assume the delay means there will be no action by this Congress.

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Alabama rise?

Mr. BLACKMON. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the chairman of this committee if four weeks would not be sufficient time in which to make this further report?

Mr. GLASS. Manifestly the chairman does not think so or he would not have submitted a request for four months. I do not think so, I will say to my colleague.

Mr. BLACKMON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HENRY. Withhold the objection for a moment.

Mr. BLACKMON. I withhold it for a moment.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] if his request means that the subject shall be foreclosed from consideration by the House for four months, or if the Committee on Banking and Currency would not consider they had authority to take up the question and report it to the House at any time even if this resolution was passed?

Mr. GLASS. Undoubtedly we do not apprehend it will require four months. We discussed that in the committee. As a matter of precaution it was decided that we had best ask for an extension of time for four months. The personal-credit aspect of the matter has received very little attention so far, because the time of the committee has been devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the land-mortgage credit aspect of the subject.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I understand the difficulty under which this committee labors, and of course it has been a very hard task to write both of these bills. I am in hopes we may have legislation at this session. It was promised some time ago. It has been delayed too long. I do not wish to put any obstacle in the way of the committee, but it seems to me that it might get busy and give us legislation within the next month or so on the personal-credit phase of this question, and I will ask the gentleman if the Committee on Banking and Currency purposes taking up that question, too, and going into it immediately?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HENRY. I would like to have an answer to the question.

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. On what subject?

Mr. LANGLEY. On the tariff, the President's message, the war tax, preparedness, and so forth. [Laughter.] And to print certain articles bearing on these subjects.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I shall probably have occasion during this session to express my views upon some, and perhaps all, of the topics I have mentioned in making this request, and I shall not therefore at this time attempt to discuss them in detail. My chief purpose is to put in the RECORD the recent expressions of certain distinguished Democrats who have heretofore enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the rank and file of their party. I am doing this with malice toward none and charity for all and in obedience to a sense of public duty, in the hope that a good many patriotic and trustful Democrats who are not subscribers to the papers in which these were published may thus be given the opportunity of reading what some of their leaders think of what the present Democratic Congress and administration have done and are proposing to do. First let me quote from the "peerless leader," the Hon. William Jennings Bryan. On the front page of one of the December issues of the Commoner there appears the following editorial, signed by Mr. Bryan:

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE ANALYZED.

I have carefully read the President's message. We are committed to legislation which will give to the Filipinos the promise of ultimate independence, with steady progress in that direction. I am sure, too, that Congress will support the President in the effort to secure justice for Porto Rico. Recent events have strengthened the arguments in favor of the establishment of a Government-controlled fleet of merchantmen, and events have also increased the demand for a rural-credits measure written in the interest of the farmers.

But when the President touches on preparedness and suggests a scheme of taxation for carrying out the plan he enters a new field, and his revolutionary recommendations will find increasing opposition in both parties. The reasons which he gives do not support the appropriations for which he asks. Pan Americanism, if it differs at all from the Monroe doctrine, ought to lessen rather than increase the necessity for preparedness. If a small Army and Navy were sufficient to enforce the Monroe doctrine when the Latin American countries were suspicious of the United States, why do we need an increase now when that suspicion is removed and when the Republics of Central and South America are willing to cooperate with us in the support of the Monroe doctrine? Then, too, the enormous destruction of life in Europe will reduce the pressure over there and make it less probable that any nation in the near future will desire to colonize Latin America.

The President is unfortunate, also, in his suggestions in regard to taxes. The Democrats will not take kindly to the idea of taxing gasoline and automobiles. A few years ago only the rich owned automobiles; now they are becoming the farmers' carry-all, and with the increased use of gasoline for agricultural purposes, the farmer would feel that he was being singled out and made to bear new burdens for the benefit of munition factories to get ready for imaginary wars.

If an additional income tax is resorted to, the Democrats will, I think, insist that the burden be placed on large incomes and inheritances rather than on the incomes of those who will have to do the fighting if there is any fighting to be done.

The President's plan of taxation is quite sure to arouse opposition among the Republicans, whose support is solicited, as well as among the Democrats. The Republicans are not likely to favor the new income taxes, and they will probably demand as a condition to their support an increase in the tariff, to which the Democrats will not consent.

While the President's plan to largely increase the appropriations for the Army and Navy ought to fail because there is no necessity for such increase, its defeat will be made more certain by the dissensions sure to arise over the different kinds of taxation.

W. J. BRYAN.

Difficult as it may be for some to believe, this is the same Mr. Bryan who thrice led the Democratic hosts of the Nation. This is the same Mr. Bryan over whom the Democrats of Kentucky so often went into ecstasies of enthusiasm, and who, when his Democratic brethren of the old Commonwealth were hard pressed by their ancient foe, was brought down to sweep across the "Pennyrite" and the "Purchase" with cyclonic irresistibility. It is the same Mr. Bryan who took from that beloved old Democratic hero, CHAMP CLARK, the nomination at Baltimore and gave it to the man who wanted him—"knocked into a cocked hat" and whom he is now seeking to convert into a sombrero of a similar design. As I think of it all the memories of the mighty past come floating back to me. I can hear the tread of the marshaled hosts of Kentucky Democracy as they shout, "Bryan! Bryan! William Jennings Bryan!" I hear again the echo of their applause when he is announced as the premier of the Cabinet. But lo, what a change has come over the spirit of their dreams. Their idol has been shattered; the mighty has fallen, and "now lies he there, and none so poor to do him reverence." My heart goes out in solicitude and sympathy for certain distinguished Kentucky Democrats who for these many years have posed as the mouthpiece and personal representatives of the matchless Nebraskan, and who in more recent times have been given the added prestige of being also the spokesman of his late chieftain, of whom he is now the foremost critic. I am wondering how these spokesmen are going to play the rôle of "good Lord, good devil," and I can not suppress a faint smile when I recall how merciless they were in twitting us over our little broils of four years ago and how conscienceless they were in taking advantage of them. Yea, verily, it maketh a great deal of difference whose ox is gored.

There is another distinguished Democrat who has been signally honored time and again by his party, whose championship of the principles of progressive Democracy is known from ocean to ocean, and whose name is a household word almost throughout the land. I refer to the Hon. William Randolph Hearst, whose achievements in the field of journalism are without parallel and whose efforts in behalf of the toiling masses have endeared him to them to a most remarkable degree. In the New York American of December 26 last there appeared on the front page over his signature the following article:

AN AMERICAN POLICY FOR THE DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AMERICAN:

About a year ago the New York American published a signed article of mine on the tariff.

This article earnestly urged the Democratic Party to abandon its free-trade policy, a policy which had persistently proved a disastrous failure, which had continually plunged the country into the depths of financial depression during Democratic administrations, and which had invariably resulted in a deficiency of revenue, which had to be met by extraordinary taxation or bond issues.

Our so-called war taxes, the burden of which was lately reimposed upon the country by Congress, are, as a matter of fact, not war taxes at all. They are free-trade taxes.

They are the tax additions which invariably follow Democratic tariff reductions.

They are direct assessments, levied upon the public to meet the deficit caused by the customary and conventional Democratic experiments in free trade.

However destructive the ultimate effect of the European war may be upon the foreign markets of this country, the immediate effect of the war has undoubtedly been to increase the consumption and accentuate the demand in Europe for a considerable number of our American products.

All sorts of food supplies and all sorts of manufactured articles required by the gigantic European armies have been in unusual demand and at extraordinary prices.

America therefore has sold an unusual amount of certain products at exceptionally high rates, with great commercial and financial advantage.

On the other hand, the scarcity of productive European labor, the demands of Europe for its own materials, the difficulties and dangers of transportation by sea have to a considerable extent excluded European products from the United States.

The European war, therefore, and the conditions which it has created should have brought unprecedented, even though impermanent, prosperity to the United States, and if the war has failed to do this because of the Democratic depression which it has had first to overcome, it has at any rate saved the country from the full disaster of the Democratic policy of reckless tariff reduction.

We have as yet, therefore, fortunately felt but little of free-trade disaster, and only such free-trade depression as must follow conditions of business disturbance, combined with the daze of uncertainty and the dread of impending injury.

Soon, however, the European war must end. Then the full effect of the Democratic policy of unscientific tariff reduction will fall upon our country.

We will then no longer have the enormous artificial demand for war supplies and food products which has partly sustained our industries, or, rather, which has sustained part of our industries during this war period.

We must then confront the unhappy condition of having our markets much more than ever open to European competition and our own products much less than ever in demand in European markets.

The Democratic administration might have obviated this destructive and depressing situation to a great extent by adopting a policy of reciprocity, by using the proposed modifications of our tariff and the resultant opening of our markets to foreign products as a lever to secure, by reciprocity treaties, the freedom of foreign markets to our products.

But the administration, unfortunately, did not have the business experience and judgment to see the advantage and advisability of such reciprocal relations.

The United States of America is the greatest business country in the world, but only occasionally has this great business country had anything approaching an intelligent business administration of its Government.

The present administration is no doubt well meaning enough, but it is impractical and inexperienced.

It is an administration of theories and vagaries, of prejudices and impulses, of incongruities and inconsistencies.

It is an administration of visionary policy, conceived in vanity and confirmed in fanatical obstinacy.

Reciprocity is a hundred-year-old Democratic doctrine.

Reciprocity was the especial plan of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party.

Reciprocity has had the support and sanction of nearly every great Democratic leader who has led his party to sustained national success.

Reciprocity was the policy of the leaders of the recent Democratic Congresses to such an extent that when President Taft announced his conversion to reciprocity the Democratic leaders in Congress pledged him their support on the ground that "reciprocity was an accepted and established Democratic doctrine."

But this tried and proven Democratic policy has been discarded.

The recommendations of the Democratic leaders in Congress have been rejected.

The possibilities of overcoming the imminent dangers of unmitigated tariff reduction have neither been discerned nor embraced.

A policy of unreasoning tariff reduction has been adopted, with all its demonstrated industrial disturbances and eventual disasters, instead of that policy of reciprocity which would have obtained for our manufacturers the same advantages in foreign markets which we are extending to foreign manufacturers in our markets.

The wind was not tempered to the shorn industrial lambs, and, as a consequence, many of the most promising of the industrial flock have sickened, and some have died.

Our national yield of golden fleece from wealth-producing industries will be diminished to a proportionate degree. Our national resources in products and profits, in work and wages, will be decreased to a similar extent.

Not only individuals but the Nation has felt a lack of income, despite the artificial stimulus of war prices.

Thus taxes have been increased, although our ability to pay them is not as great as it once was.

And the end is not yet.

We have still to face the full and final results of Democratic folly and fatuity which will surely be upon us at the end of the European war.

Why, then, should the Democratic Party, now reassembled in Congress, not take advantage of the temporary respite which the war provides?

Why should the Democrats in Congress, and in the administration, too, if there be any there, not realize and admit that a tariff for revenue and for protection is not merely a Republican policy, it is an American policy?

It has been approved by the American people; it has been indorsed by history, fortified by fact, and sustained by experience.

Let the Democrats accept this well-proven policy and contrast the narrow and selfish Republican policy of protection for favored interests with the broader governmental and better business policy of just and judicious protection to increase our products at home and widespread reciprocity to extend our markets abroad.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

This is mighty sound advice to his Democratic brethren in Congress, and it contains much that any good Republican can enthusiastically indorse.

Indeed it shows pretty conclusively that we Republicans are correct in the contention that in the aggregate the European war has helped rather than harmed us, and that but for the curtailment of foreign competition and the increased demand for our products, resulting from the war, we would have fared far worse than we have. It emphasizes also the further fact that the American doctrine of protection is indispensable to the solvency of our Treasury and the prosperity of our people, and it shows that such prosperity as we now enjoy has been produced by the wall that the European war built around this country, which is higher than any tariff wall ever built. In other words, it is a complete vindication of the doctrine of protection. Of course the advice of Mr. Hearst will fall upon heedless Democratic ears, but, speaking for myself alone, I congratulate him upon the splendid Americanism and lofty statesmanship which his article displays.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave of absence for my colleague, Mr. DARROW, on account of death in his family.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech by H. L. Loucks on rural credit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. DILLON] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech by H. L. Loucks on rural credit. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday, following the regular order of business, I may have one hour's time in which to discuss inland waterways.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] asks unanimous consent that on next Thursday at the close of the regular business he shall have one hour in which to address the House on the subject of inland waterways. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what does the gentleman mean by "the close of regular business"?

Mr. BORLAND. I suppose there will be some order of business on that day that will have privilege. I do not know.

Mr. MANN. We never run out of regular order of business here.

Mr. BORLAND. I will make it, then, at the close of the morning hour.

Mr. MANN. We have a special order for Thursday. Why does not the gentleman make it following the special order?

Mr. BORLAND. That was the intention.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent for an hour next Thursday after the disposition of the Moon bill, which is pending business. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of rural credits.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LAZARO] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of rural credits. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a request for a colleague. I desire to ask unanimous consent that immediately after the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] has concluded his remarks the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DAVIS]—known as "Cyclone" DAVIS—be allowed one hour in which to address the House on the subject of rural credits. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the speech of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], his colleague from Texas [Mr. DAVIS] be permitted to address the House for one hour on the subject of rural credits.

Mr. HENRY. And preparedness.

The SPEAKER. And preparedness, and so forth. [Laughter.] Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, when is this to be?

The SPEAKER. To be at the close of the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] on Thursday.

Mr. MANN. Suppose it should not come on Thursday, will that run over until Friday?

The SPEAKER. It would not.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent—

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, was my request granted?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY]?

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, which I do not intend to do, I want to serve notice that there are some important bills on the calendar, and I think they ought to be taken up, and I will object to any more permissions to address the House at this time.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will not give that notice, with two requests on that side already granted and when I am about to prefer one on this side of the House.

Mr. FERRIS. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am always ready to yield to a suggestion, but here is the situation: Next spring we shall all be trying to go home to our campaigns, and these days that are sought to be devoted to speeches ought to be used in getting the bills through.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Oklahoma objecting or not?

Mr. FERRIS. I do not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, let me make a request. I ask unanimous consent that to-morrow, after the reading of the Journal, the gentleman from Washington may have one hour in which to address the House. I hope the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] will not object to that.

Mr. FERRIS. To-morrow is Calendar Wednesday and we expect to get our bill called up then.

Mr. MANN. Oh, it will come later. I do not wish to interfere with the consideration of the bill. That will be time enough, I think.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not think the gentleman ought to ask that on Wednesday. That is a day when we have our only chance to get up our bills. But I shall not object.

The SPEAKER. What gentleman from Washington is it?

Mr. MANN. Mr. HUMPHREY.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent that to-morrow, immediately after the reading of the Journal and the transaction of the routine business, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY] shall have an hour in which to address the House—upon what?

Mr. MANN. On the state of the Union. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. On the state of the Union. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing two addresses recently delivered at the Rivers and Harbors Congress in this city—one by Representative MOORE, of Pennsylvania, and one by Dock Commissioner Smith, of New York City.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing two speeches recently made at the River and Harbor Convention in this city, one by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] and one by Dock Commissioner Smith, of New York. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I have no objection, let me say, to the printing of the address made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], and I do not know that I shall object to the other, but it seems to me that there was some sort of a rule made here just before the holidays about printing those addresses that had been delivered at that Rivers and Harbors Convention, and objection was made to several separate requests on the theory that so many speeches had been delivered at that congress that it was impracticable to undertake to print them all in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It seems to me that if that proposition was laid down at that time and adhered to at that time it ought to be adhered to now. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] himself perhaps made that suggestion.

Mr. MANN. I am not sure whether it was I that made the suggestion or the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART], but I know that we both believe it ought to be observed.

Mr. GARRETT. I have no objection to the printing of an address made by a Member of the House.

Mr. MANN. A Member of the House?

Mr. GARRETT. Yes; a Member of the House, by Mr. MOORE, if the gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET] will separate his two requests.

Mr. BARNHART rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana rise?

Mr. BARNHART. To state briefly that there was an understanding, after due announcement was made, that a report of these speeches covering very largely the whole field to be covered would be undertaken, and that there would be no more of these speeches printed that were delivered. However, there were not a great many Members of the House present at the time. I want to join my colleague from Illinois and the gentleman from Tennessee in the position they take. Speeches by Members of Congress I will not object to, but I will object to the printing of speeches made by others, and I hope the gentleman from New York will separate his requests.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, of course I will divide my requests; but this address by the dock commissioner of New York will take, I will say, less than three-quarters of one column in the RECORD. In the presence of the present condition of New York Harbor in New York City this House is entitled to the information that is contained in the dock commissioner's statement, and therefore I hope that neither of the gentlemen will object.

Mr. BARNHART. The gentleman himself can give that information.

Mr. BENNET. No.

Mr. GARRETT. May I ask the gentleman from New York if he deals with that particular thing and not with the general features?

Mr. BENNET. It is not the general condition. It was on the condition of the harbor of New York, and, as I recall it, it dealt very largely on the condition of the harbor and national preparedness. Therefore it seems to me it ought to be printed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE—H. R. 4737.

Mr. TAGGART rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kansas rise?

Mr. TAGGART. To ask for a change of reference of House bill 4737, which I introduced, for the purpose of extending the provisions of the pension laws to include the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Regiments of Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, a bill which by inadvertence was sent to the Committee on Invalid Pensions when it should have been referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The SPEAKER. Why should it be referred to the Committee on Pensions?

Mr. TAGGART. Those organizations did not serve in the Civil War, but in an Indian war.

The SPEAKER. Were the organizations made in the Civil War?

Mr. TAGGART. No; they did not serve in the Civil War.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows; but were they made in the Civil War?

Mr. TAGGART. No, sir, Mr. Speaker; they were organized some few years after the close of it.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to be heard. Is this a public bill or a private bill?

Mr. TAGGART. It is a public bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 50 minutes on the subject of the national defense.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SHERWOOD] asks unanimous consent to address the House for 50 minutes on the subject of the national defense. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, of course we will have horrors and horrors on account of this barbarous submarine warfare; but the worst that can happen is the severance of diplomatic relations with any and all Empires across the Atlantic wherein American citizens are murdered. But this does not mean war. On our southwestern border during the past two years 153 American citizens have been brutally murdered, not because they were on a ship carrying the flag of a belligerent or were found with a hostile army, but solely because they were American citizens, unarmed noncombatants.

All these unspeakable horrors did not happen in a hostile zone 3,000 miles away, but within 100 miles of our own borders. This submarine warfare is the most cowardly and barbarous of all warfare since the world began. And yet we are building a whole brood of submarines.

War is the greatest crime of the human race. It is not in my philosophy that if the murder of one man makes a villain, the murder of thousands makes a hero. It is in my philosophy that the hero of humane achievement in the uplift of his fellows transcends the hero of blood and iron and noise in a war of conquest. It is as true to-day as 87 years ago, when uttered by that greatest of Englishmen, Thomas Carlyle:

A standing army means waste, depression, and moral decay. No nation can improve its morals or grow in strength when its bravest and best sons are year by year devoured in the army.

This is the stand taken to-day by the sanest statesmen and ripest scholars of the age. A great student of ethics says: "The soul grows in the direction of its attention."

A nation, which is only the aggregation of individual souls, can not be moving toward peace while definitely preparing for war.

It is with the deepest regret that I am unable to agree with the President on his proposed plan of national defense. The President has rendered great service to the country by his superb diplomacy in keeping the country in the path of peace. He has had more difficult and perplexing problems to solve than any President since the adoption of our Federal Constitution, and his unflinching devotion to duty, his superb poise and masterful grasp of the many diplomatic problems, which he has settled in the interest of peace, entitle him to the lasting gratitude of all the people. I believe, however, that he has mistaken the popular judgment in his preparedness message. I believe the defeat of this scheme for extra taxation at this time, when the Federal Treasury is lank and lean, will command the approval and support of a majority of the people.

While I have been a peace man for over half a century, I have never been a peace-at-any-price devotee. Neither am I a member of any society or association for limiting national armament. I am not from Missouri, but before I vote to waste any more money to increase idle armies or top-heavy navies I want to know what emergency exists for such expenditure. [Applause.] Up to date none of the advocates of "preparedness" have given Congress or the people one valid reason why we should squander any more hard-earned tax money on militarism. Not one of this whole array of pretending patriots have pointed to an enemy either hostile to the United States or liable to attack the United States. Less than one year ago, when the armies of Europe were more powerful, more formidable, than now by at least 5,000,000 soldiers, the President and the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy all took strong grounds, in public interviews and proclamations, that we were fully prepared for any emergency. This is so well known that I need not cumber the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD with any quotations from their well-timed utterances of sanity and sense. Furthermore, the so-called experts of the Army and Navy less than one year ago fully fortified the attitude of both the President and his Cabinet on this vital question. At the hearings in the last session of Congress Gen. Erasmus M. Weaver, Chief of Coast Artillery, whose duty it is, he said, to "be advised as to the character and sufficiency of our seacoast armament," stated:

My information is that our system of fortification is reasonably adequate for all defensive purposes which they are likely to be called upon to meet.

And further said:

I have been a close student of the whole subject, naturally, for a number of years, and I know of no fortifications in the world, as far as my reading, observation, and knowledge goes, that compare favorably in efficiency with ours.

Gen. Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, considered one of the greatest experts in the country on fortifications and guns, said:

In my opinion, these guns, with other advantages which our land-defense fortifications have, will be adequate for maintaining a successful combat with vessels of war armed with any gun which is now under construction anywhere in the world to my knowledge.

A very distinguished statesman of the Republican Party, late a candidate for President and a close student of continental events, gives the country the benefit of his investigation as to the origin of this colossal military propaganda. I quote from La Follette's Magazine, which has not yet been sued for libel:

Who are the real patriots of the country? They are the glorious group of multimillionaires who are making such enormous profits out of the European war as were never before realized in the same brief period since time began. They are the Morgans, the Rockefellers, the Schwabs, the Gays, the du Ponts, and their prototypes, who are back of the 38 corporations most benefited by war orders, the stocks of which have increased more than a thousand million dollars above their highest market value before the war. They are the dollar-scarred heroes who organized the Navy League of the United States. Shades of Lincoln! What a band of patriots, with their business connections covering every financial and industrial center in the United States! Owning newspapers, periodicals, and magazines and controlling through business relations the editorial good will of many others, they will be able to render powerful but disinterested aid in the great propaganda for preparedness now flooding the country.

The bold Wisconsin editor and statesman gives us an adequate idea of the original source of the viperous hellbroth of threatening war now sending its malignant poison through war-scare journals and magazines into the hearts and homes of thousands of well-meaning, timid Americans.

Congress, under the Constitution, is the only power competent to declare war. If there is any enemy in sight or likely to attack the United States, it is the sole duty of Congress to take the initiative; and the power to declare war implies the power to make all preparations for war. Article I, section 8, of the original Constitution, also states that Congress shall have power to provide for the common defense. Hence it follows that Congress has the sole power not only to declare war, but to provide for the common defense, and Congress will be held strictly to account by the people in the coming November for any ill-timed or unnecessary laws, whether enacted through fear of an impossible enemy or because a powerful and greed-hungry cabal demanded the sacrifice. No individual Member of Congress can shift the responsibility for his vote on this the most vital question of the hour upon either the President or his Cabinet.

In all our history, from the first proclamation of the Federal Constitution, signed by George Washington as President, September 17, 1787, until now, no political party, no leading statesman or leading publicist has ever before advocated a great standing Army and Navy in time of peace. Whenever we are liable to be confronted with an armed enemy I will vote for as many armed men and as much money as the President may demand; and, furthermore, I will volunteer as a soldier to go to the front, which is more than any of this powerful array of culpable curmudgeons, who originated this horrid war scare, will ever do. [Applause.]

It is now up to this Congress to decide whether all the sacred history of the past, sacred because humane and successful for over a hundred years of undisturbed peace, shall continue to endure in the purpose and hope of its founders, or whether we shall enter the devious path of world-power exploitation. Militarism and imperialism are a couplet of devious devils that will carry the American people on the down grade speedily. You can not separate militarism from imperialism. To use an unclerical expression, they are twin devils of rapacity and moral decay—useless one without the other. Like the Siamese twins of long-time memory, they are coursed with the same blood, and if you cut the umbilical cord both will languish and die. [Applause.]

Here is what George Allen England says of this humbug scare, misnamed "preparedness":

The whole thing is perfectly obvious. Seizing upon the European butchery as an excuse, the armament makers and militarists are determined to drive this country over the brink if they can. They remain indifferent to all truisms such as that "preparedness" has not prevented but has always induced war. There is money in this thing for them: so down with old age pensions, educational expansion, improvements of all kinds, and hurrah for Moloch. Militarism is a quick cut to millions. Moloch, militarism, murder, massacre—I think that sums it all up with neatness and dispatch.

The Toledo Blade, of my district, the oldest daily journal in northwestern Ohio of the Republican faith, says:

SHERWOOD stands alone among the Ohio delegation on the preparedness program.

While this is evidently a mistake, I should not feel lonesome or discouraged were it true. Not long ago the Ohio State Journal, another old-time Republican paper, published in the State capital, printed an editorial with the following closing paragraph:

We wish Ohio could take a positive stand for peace in the Halls of Congress. It has not done so. There is only one man who has represented his constituents faithfully upon this matter, and that is Gen. SHERWOOD, of the Toledo district. He has sounded the true note every time.

Well, I have been alone before. The bill of May 13, 1908, to build a harbor of safety and a dry dock at Pearl Harbor in the Sandwich Islands, a bill providing for spending over $3,000,000, invoked much skyrocket oratory on the floor of the House. There was fear of a formidable raid on our Pacific coast by Japan. One of the leading orators of this eventful day was Capt. Hobson, of Alabama. He convinced the alert-eared Members that Japan was about to attack the United States and assume warlike control of the great Pacific Ocean, and without this ocean control America would be lost. The measure passed the House with a hurrah—229 yeas to 1 no, as I remember. On a roll call I was the only Member voting against it. The tally clerk, out of sheer pity, came to me and said, "You are the only one voting 'no'; I thought you had made a mistake." Let us see.

Our biggest battleships have a water displacement of 26 feet and the entrance to Pearl Harbor has only a depth, as I learn, of about 15 feet, and the bottom is coral rock. Hence, if we should happen to have a war with Japan and a naval conflict should occur 2,000 miles from the Pacific coast and one or more of our battleships should be disabled and should seek safety in Pearl Harbor, it would hardly be able to skim through 15 feet of water depth with a battleship of 26 feet water displacement. Amount expended for dredging to date, $3,296,000. And yet the original foolhardy Pearl Harbor preparedness was as well grounded in sanity and sense as the present plan of "preparedness" and not so expensive by some $445,000,000.

SOME STAGGERING FIGURES.

For the 10 years preceding the European war we had expended on our Navy over $300,000,000 more than Germany or any other nation except Great Britain.

These estimates almost stagger belief; and yet this is not all the advocates of "preparedness" demand. If carried into national law, it means national bankruptcy; of course, the swift ruin of the Democratic Party, if a majority votes for this stupendous, uncalled-for extravagance. There is sure to be a healthy change of heart when the facts are known among all classes of patriotic, peace-loving American citizens. Very few persons who are talking about "preparedness" have any adequate idea of the immense tax burden involved, not only for this year but for all the coming years. Here are the staggering figures, all to be provided for in a new tax bill:

The five-year naval program calls for an increase of $500,000,000—$100,000,000 increase a year—which, including the expenses for expanding the whole naval establishment, will reach $600,000,000 or over by the time the five years expire. This is all extra—in addition to the large appropriations we are now making for our idle, top-heavy Navy. The Army four-year program demands $450,000,000 increase, over $100,000,000 a year extra, being an increase of more than 100 per cent over our annual Army appropriations. All extra appropriations. At the expiration of the five-year period for the program this country will then be expending on its Army and Navy more than any nation in the world in times of peace ever expended.

In 1891 the Navy had 1,483 officers, exclusive of 239 naval cadets at the Naval Academy. The number of enlisted men allowed in 1891 was 8,250, and the amount appropriated that year was $24,610,501. In 1915 the officers numbered 3,403, the naval cadets numbered 912, the enlisted men numbered 52,561, and the amount appropriated was $145,734,163. In other words, we now have a little more than twice as many officers as in 1891, more than three times as many naval cadets, more than six times as many enlisted men, and nearly six times as large an appropriation. We have now the second strongest Navy in the world, with no enemy in sight and nothing to do but waste powder in target practice, concoct war scares, and give tone and polish to our flamboyant Washington society. [Laughter and applause.] "In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," as Gen. Ethan Allen remarked at the gates of Fort Ticonderoga, what has become of that vital plank of the Baltimore national platform pledging the Democratic Party to economy and the abolition of useless offices? [Applause.]

What does the greatest living soldier in the United States think of this continental enlistment scheme recommended by the Secretary of War? I refer to Gen. Nelson A. Miles, a soldier who commanded an army corps in the Army of the Potomac when only 25 years of age—not only a gallant and conspicuous general with a four years' battle service in our great Civil War, but noted as the most successful Indian fighter in the after-war period. Gen. Miles has visited and inspected the army of every one of the great powers of Europe and has more expert knowledge of war's machinery than any soldier or war specialist in the United States. Of course, Gen. Miles is against the scheme. He seems to think the scheme did not originate with the Secretary of War, but was concocted in our so-called War College. The War College, as we remember, was the favorite militant child of Col. Roosevelt when he was President. Hence the scheme has a wild and woolly flavor. [Applause and laughter.]

The National Guard is almost unanimously opposed to this kind of preparedness. In the recent national convention of the National Guard in San Francisco, after hearing a powerful letter read from the Secretary of War, and hearing a fervid oration by the eloquent Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge, the convention turned down the continental proposition. The same action was taken by the State convention of the Ohio National Guard held later in Cincinnati.

In further contention as to our ample preparedness for war, let me state that during the last 17 years 381,312 men have been enlisted, and these with the number in the Army would make a total of more than 400,000 men that have passed through the drill, instruction, and discipline of the military service. Approximately the same number have received military instruction in the National Guard. Added to these figures, there are between two and three millions of men in our country that have passed through all the drill, discipline, and instruction of European armies, and who are now, in the main, earnest patriotic citizens of the great Republic. Approximately 25,000 young men are graduating every year from our colleges and institutions where military instruction is given. I am indebted to Gen. Miles for these vital statistics.

During the last 30 years the Government has expended nearly $176,000,000 on our seacoast defenses, and the result at Cairo, Port Arthur, and the Dardanelles is sufficient evidence that guns on board ship are no match for coast fortifications and submarine mines. Within the control of the National Government and States there are at least 1,000,000 serviceable rifles. Our gun and ammunition factories are manufacturing daily at least 5,000,000 cartridges and will soon be capable of manufacturing 50,000 artillery shells. In fact, there is now being constructed in our country daily more war material than any two armies now warring against each other in Europe are using in the same time. Hence the alarming clamor about our unpreparedness is criminal foolishness. It should fool no grown-up person outside of an idiotic asylum. [Laughter and applause.]

HOW THE FARMERS STAND.

The farmers in my district are everywhere reported against "preparedness." The State Grange of Ohio, recently in session in Elyria, declared against it. I noticed the Farmers' Union of North Carolina, 50,000 strong, declared against it. I am in receipt of the leading farm journal, the National Field, of December 2, the national organ of the Farmers' Alliance. It prints a very strong editorial, covering two entire pages, giving cogent reasons why farmers everywhere should be against this unnecessary extravagance. I have numerous letters from representative farmers, from the Middle West and Far West, all against preparedness. A letter from A. M. Criswell, president Farmers' Alliance, Biddleton, State of Washington, says:

We held a large farmers union last night and took a vote on Wilson's "preparedness," or rather on the defense bill, and not a vote was in favor of that plan.

William Madison Hicks, Oologah, Okla., under date of November 23, writes:

I was at Coweta last Saturday and delivered an address on the plan of the President for "preparedness," and the whole country seemed to be aroused against the military scheme. The citizens, without regard to political preferment, openly indorsed the stand taken by Hon. W. J. Bryan on this issue. The citizens at Chelsea, White Hill, Sperry, and Sageeyah have openly condemned, but the great dallies refuse to let the country know what we are doing. In southeast Kansas in the last 10 days and in southwest Missouri in the same time, 53 public mass meetings have been held condemning the President's plan, and yet not one of these resolutions have found its way into print.

Col. Frank G. Yeoman, a veteran soldier and leading Democrat of Milledgeville, Ill., writes that his business has taken him over Carroll County, and finds that not 10 per cent of either party favor the so-called preparedness scheme. A. W. Lewis, of Berkeley, Cal., a student and writer on social and economic reform, writes as follows:

This is the hour when true men must arise and be numbered. Ascertain if this malign influence for a big military establishment emanates from the noble spirit of American manhood, or from those who are solely animated from the mean spirit of selfishness and greed.

THE LABOR UNIONS AGAINST.

The labor unions in my district are against "preparedness." At a called meeting of the Central Labor Union of Toledo, representing 10,000 organized workers and 91 locals, a resolution was passed, without one dissenting vote, against the "preparedness" scheme. Here is a specimen resolution passed by the machinist union, the largest local in Toledo:

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MACHINISTS.

Toledo, Ohio, November 16, 1915.

At the last regular meeting of Lodge 105 the lodge, consisting of over 1,600 members, went on record as opposed to a larger Army or Navy, the vote being unanimous against it.

EARL H. DEANE,
Recording Secretary.

Here let me quote an extract from a signed statement made by our able, experienced, and alert leader, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]:

In the face of the fact that we have a Navy superior to that of Germany or any other nation, except that of Great Britain; in the face of the fact that our Navy is growing larger, stronger, and better equipped than ever before; in the face of the fact, as the President declared both in his message to Congress December last and in his recent Manhattan Club speech, "We are threatened from no quarter," the proposed "preparedness" program at one bound—one year—increases our already immensely large naval appropriations more than our total increase for the last 14 years, more than the increase by Germany the whole 15 years preceding the European war, and more than the combined increase of all the nations in the world in any one year in their history (in times of peace). The five-year program proposed increases our naval appropriation over forty times more than the increase by Germany in five years preceding the European war and $200,000,000 more than the combined increase of all the nations of the world for the five years preceding the European war, and over $50,000,000 more than the combined increase of all the nations in the world for the whole period of 10 years immediately preceding the European war. Add to this the fact that prior to the beginning of the European war we were expending annually on our Navy from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 more than Germany or any other nation, except Great Britain.

Evidently the average citizen, who has been scared into the advocacy of so-called "preparedness," has been misled by reading in the war-scare newspapers and armor-plate magazines that we are utterly unprepared. This is a slander on both our Army and our Navy. And it is untrue, unfair, and unpatriotic. We have the strongest Navy in the world for all defensive purposes in our own waters; and in education, in deportment, in discipline and efficiency, we have the best naval officers in the world. And our Army officers in discipline and deportment and efficiency will compare favorably with the officers of any army anywhere on either continent.

I have no criticism of either the Army or the Navy. My objection is not to quality or efficiency, but to quantity. We need no big military establishment in this Republic. As Cardinal Gibbons very wisely says, we are protected east and west by two great oceans, a protection far more formidable than forts or cannon or navies; and our people, already overtaxed, can not stand the burden of an increased military establishment already too costly.

At the beginning of the European war Germany was expending for past wars and preparations for wars—on its army and navy—55 per cent of the total amount of revenues collected; Japan, 45 per cent; Great Britain, 37 per cent; France, 35 per cent; the United States, over 60 per cent. With the proposed military and naval program enacted into law the United States will be expending over 70 per cent of its total revenues; that is, out of every $100 collected from the people over $70 will go into militarism and navalism and vampirism to mark the ruin of the Republic of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Abraham Lincoln.

SOME ILLUMINATING HISTORY.

On the question of national armament I take my stand with Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence and father of the Democratic Party. [Applause.] In 1799 Thomas Jefferson wrote Elbridge Gerry as follows:

I am for relying for internal defense on our militia solely till actual invasion, and for such a naval force only as will protect our coast harbors from depredations, and not for a standing army in time of peace which may overcome the public sentiment, nor a navy which by its own expenses and the external wars in which it may implicate us will grind us with public burdens and sink us under them.

Here is a fateful admonition for this hour. Jefferson made the protest against the standing army of England the most vital paragraph in the Declaration of Independence. In all the grievances protested against in that immortal document the standing army, as a menace to the peace and prosperity of the Colonies, was mentioned in three separate paragraphs, while every other grievance was mentioned but once.

Let me cite some illuminating history on the preparedness of 95 years ago. In December, 1823, President Monroe issued his memorable message embodying what is now known as the Monroe doctrine. This message was a bold deft and challenge to the three great powers of Europe, known as the Holy Alliance. This Holy Alliance was a league formed in September, 1815, after the Battle of Waterloo had sent Napoleon into exile. It was formed by Alexander the First of Russia, Emperor Francis of Austria, William the Third of Prussia, and indorsed by nearly all the second-class powers of Europe. This Holy Alliance was formed to preserve monarchical absolutism in Europe, and secondarily to see to it that no member of the Bonaparte family should ever occupy any throne in Europe. That President Monroe issued his famous message embodying the Monroe doctrine against any interference by this alliance is a well-established fact. Prof. Peck, in his new International Encyclopedia, says:

The most noteworthy attempt of this Holy Alliance was to extend its operation to the New World by the coercion of Spain's revolting colonies.

President Monroe's message was a challenge to the whole formidable array of Old World monarchies, far more defiant and sweeping than Jefferson's deft to Great Britain July 4, 1776. How about our preparedness then? We had only 10,000 soldiers in the Regular Army, including infantry, artillery, and riflemen. And how about our Navy? We had 7 wooden battle-ships, 9 small frigates, 2 corvettes—low sloops with one tier of guns—5 sloops, 2 brigs, and 5 small schooners, 30 war craft all told. And how many sea dogs of war did we have then? Let us see. We had 30 captains, 30 master commandants, 9 chaplains, 356 midshipmen, 53 sailing masters, 16 boatswains, and 18 gunners—all told only 512, besides the lieutenants, quartermasters, and Army surgeons. What was the entire population of the United States at that critical period—1823? By the census of 1820 we had, including Indians, 9,633,822. How much did our Navy cost us in 1823? Nine hundred and twenty-nine thousand five hundred and three dollars all told. Did the Monroe doctrine precipitate war? No. We had 3,000 miles of deep ocean between us and any possible enemy in the Old World. That same ocean still rolls between, and we have now 100,000,000 instead of less than 10,000,000 in 1820. Who is afraid? No one with self-poise or ordinary horse sense or courage sufficient to be a citizen of America. [Applause.]

I desire to call the attention of the advocates of "preparedness" to a very valuable pamphlet just issued by Anson Phelps Stokes, secretary of the Yale University. Let me quote from the closing paragraph:

If the United States tries to frighten Europe by her armaments, her distrust of us and her misinterpreting of our motives will lead to deep suspicions and hatred, and these are the things that surely breed war. Knowing that "armed peace" has proved a sham and delusion in Europe, why should not our Nation be willing to take risks for real peace in the interest of a world tired of the cruelties and horrors of war?

HYSTERIA OF 1812.

We had a very disastrous fit of hysteria in 1812, resulting in our second war with Great Britain. Some of our historians charge Henry Clay, then Speaker of the House of Representatives, with fomenting this hysteria. Let me quote what one of the greatest statesmen of the antebellum period said of that war. I refer to Senator Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts. I quote from a memorable oration delivered by Sumner in 1845:

The fruitlessness and vanity of war appear in the results of the great wars by which the world has been lacerated. After long struggles, in which each nation has inflicted and received incalculable injury, peace has been gladly obtained on the basis of the condition of things before the war. Let me refer, for an example, to our last war with Great Britain, the professed object of which was to obtain from the latter power and renunciation of her claim to impress our seamen. The greatest number of American seamen ever officially alleged to be compulsory serving in the British Navy was about 800. To overturn this injustice, the whole country was doomed for more than three years to the accursed blight of war. Our commerce was driven from the seas; resources of the land were drained by taxation; villages on the Canadian frontier were laid in ashes; the metropolis of the Republic was captured; the White House burned, while gaunt distress raged everywhere within our borders. Weary with this rude trial, our Government appointed commissioners to treat for peace, under these instructions: "Your first duty will be to conclude peace with Great Britain, and you are authorized to do it."

That is, we had some 2,000 soldiers killed, twice as many more maimed, and involved the country in an enormous debt, and then made a peace compact with Great Britain which left the impressment of our American seamen unsettled, or just where it was before the war.

THE COSTLY HYSTERIA OF 1898.

We had another violent and costly fit of military hysteria in 1898. It is now known that Cuba could have been freed without war against Spain and without shedding one drop of the blood of an American soldier. After this brief but costly war we paid Spain, a whipped nation, twenty millions for a vast group of islands, 10,000 miles away in the tropical Orient, when Spain had neither possession nor control. In fact, Spain had nothing to sell except the royal prerogative of her boy King Alfonso. We parted with our twenty millions for a tablet upon which to write the epitaph of the Republic of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln.

The Baltimore platform pledges the Democratic Party to immediate action on the Philippine problem. Lest we forget, I quote from that platform:

We favor an immediate declaration of the Nation's purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine Islands as soon as a stable government can be established.

As the Philippine Islands are both a menace and a burden and have cost us to date over one thousand millions of worse than wasted money and the lives of over 16,000 soldiers and a pension list of over thirty-five millions, why not recognize now, as a measure of national defense, that solemn promise in our national platform? [Applause.] We could then bring back some 13,000 seasoned and experienced soldiers to join our Army at home. It would also lift the white man's burden in the tropical Orient and shorten our battle line some 10,000 miles should Japan seek to dominate the Pacific Ocean. We would save about forty millions of money, now wasted yearly in the Philippines, and save also the dangerous menace of passing another emergency tax bill in the immediate presence of a presidential campaign.

Seriously, is this not more important and vital than following the lead of a mercenary coterie of murderous shrapnel and munition makers, who are coining unholy millions in the blood of innocents across the Atlantic? [Applause.] Nearly all our recognized leaders of social ethics, nearly all our great humanitarians and teachers are against this preparedness business. You can count the defenders of this wicked folly among our great teachers of moral and economic reform on the fingers of your two hands.

It is proposed to tax a patient and tolerant people, already overtaxed, that an overpowering army of idlers may be endowed to consume the savings of the industrial classes, increasing the already high cost of living, and producing nothing but discontent and trouble. It is a crime against the Republic. It is without sanity, without sense, and without excuse. And the same brood of blood-money gangsters are recommending a buzzard brood of aeroplanes. The devil of late has learned to deal destruction and death from the sky. His victims have been mostly women and children and babes. And the devil's allies now clamor for this latest and most barbarous of all war's brutalities as a part of the military outfit of this so-called Christian Republic. Furthermore, of what possible use can we ever have of aeroplanes, either to resist or aggressively fight an enemy with 3,000 miles of ocean between?

OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

Instead of increasing our standing army, already costing the taxpayers over one hundred millions a year, I favor reducing it one-half, to 50,000 men. This would probably save close to fifty millions per year. I would use an adequate sum to improve and strengthen our National Guard, which, should war ever come, will prove our chief reliance. I would set apart, say, ten millions as a starter for old-age pensions to the worthy workers, the wealth producers in our busy hives of industry. Nothing would do such valuable service in healing the constant conflicts between capital and labor as a humane system of old-age pensions, such as Prince Bismarck inaugurated in the German Empire. Not only would this benign alleviation of the woes of the workers heal the antagonism now so apparent in labor strikes, but it would be an inspiration of patriotism to every worthy worker in the United States. Our flag would then be a hope and a symbol of helpfulness, saying to every son of toil, Be true, be faithful to your trust, and when old age comes on apace this flag with the shining stars will be your protector, and a grateful Nation will help you to make your last days on earth comfortable and full of gratitude. As a matter of national defense it would be a cognate inspiration to every worker. Under this proposed system of economic reform and patriotic preparedness we could use ten millions to inaugurate a humane system of old-age pensions, and spend five millions in perfecting the National Guard, and then save thirty-five millions of our present Army budget. This would relieve our weary Ways and Means Committee of much wearing worry and prove a balm and a sweet solace to the great troubled army of overtaxed taxpayers. And the ten millions would give 100,000 old-age pensions at $100 per year. This money would all go into circulation and prove a potent element in the education of the men and women who do the world's work that this Republic is not ungrateful.

OUR COAST DEFENSES.

VIEWS OF OUR GREAT LEADERS.

Ex-Senator Root, of New York, master mind on the question of international law, was the leading speaker before the Pan American Congress in this city on December 28. I quote a significant paragraph from his address:

Some of us believe that the hope of the world's progress lies in the spread and perfection of democratic self-government. It may be that out of the rack and welter of the great conflict may arise a general consciousness that it is the people who are to be considered, their rights and liberties to govern and be governed for themselves, rather than rulers' ambitions and policies of aggrandizement.

This is surely a covert punch in the ribs of that powerful group of war exploiters in Gotham who value blood-coined dollars as more vital than orderly democratic self-government. [Applause.]

At the same session of the Pan American Congress Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, of Cornell University, predicted the settlement of future controversies by arbitration. Force as a moral means of settling controversies, he said, had failed.

At the much-exploited Clark conference at Worcester, Mass., December 18 last, Norman Angell, author of The Great Illusion and other works, whose topic was "America's need for preparedness in policy," said:

America, simmering with the new-raised doctrine of preparedness, is heading straight toward war, unless she formulates before building up her armament a definite policy to tell the world what she proposes to do with her military and naval forces. America is putting a premium on naval rivalry rather than on right or wrong by this brand of neutrality.

On the 8th of November last I received a letter dated New York from the highest class group of scholars, humanitarians, and sociologists in the United States. This letter bore this precious patriotic motto as a guiding principle:

The American League to Limit Armaments is organized to combat militarism and the spread of the militaristic spirit in the United States.

As a matter of moment let me refer to some of this group—all opposed to the preparedness propaganda:

Jane Addams, the foremost woman in the United States on social and economic reform.

William J. Curtis, eminent New York lawyer, scholar, and reformer.

Edwin T. Devine, LL. D., graduate of Cornell University; social worker; professor of social economy, Columbia University; author of humane book Misery and Its Causes and other books.

Clarence H. Kelsey, banker of New York; graduate of Yale University.

Adolph Lewisohn, noted philanthropist and writer and business man; contributed $300,000 to Columbia University.

Dr. Jacques Loeb, graduate of Berlin University; late of the University of Chicago; author of valuable work on biology.

Edwin D. Mead, lecturer and author, of Chesterfield, N. H.; secretary of the World's Peace Foundation; a high-class scholar and author of A Study of Reformation, also The Philosophy of Carlyle.

George Foster Peabody, LL. D., banker; treasurer of national Democratic committee, New York Chamber of Commerce, and high-class business man.

and author of A Biography of Fifty Years; newspaper and magazine writer of national reputation.

Lillian D. Wald, sociologist; originated the idea of Federal Children's Bureau, which passed both Houses of Congress in 1908; lecturer and philanthropist.

Rev. Booker T. Washington (deceased), the foremost leader and teacher of the colored race; the greatest man the Negro race ever produced in America.

The great rabbi, Stephen S. Wise, author of The Ethics of Solomon, profound student of human destiny and entitled to be classed as one of the greatest leaders of Israelites in America.

Mary Emma Woolley, South Norwalk, Conn., one of the great women of New England, president Mount Holyoke College, member board of electors of Hall of Fame, the Women's Educational Industrial Union, Boston Rhode Island Society for Collegiate Education for Women, author "Monographs" and numerous other pamphlets and essays on topics of reform and human betterment.

The Rev. Washington Gladden, the leading Protestant minister of Ohio in the broad domain of civics, a recognized teacher of sociology, is preaching powerful sermons against this military propaganda.

Even in this wicked city of Washington, where the newspapers are all one way, there is a healthy and growing sentiment against this military propaganda. We have a well-organized peace society, a rational defense league, opposed to war, and an antimilitary organization, all composed of influential men and women. Here is a letter from Takoma Park, Washington, D. C., dated December 31, 1915, from the Social Study Club. This club is composed of 10 scientists, a leading minister, a charity worker, and a War Department official. After a full debate, the vote stood 3 in favor and 8 against the military program of the administration.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio have time to conclude his remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio be permitted to conclude his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERWOOD. As this is not a political question, I have sent letters, which have been published in my district, asking for instructions from my constituents how to vote on this vital matter. I have not received one solitary letter, telegram, or verbal message asking me to vote for this colossal extravagance. It is due to say, however, that there is a National Defense League in Toledo composed of 10 or 12 high-class citizens.

I also have a petition, signed by 275 high-class scholars and leaders of the best thought in New York City and vicinity, all for peace and against the barbarism of war preparedness.

I must not fail to mention the superb attitude of that profound thinker and venerated prelate, Cardinal Gibbons. The views of Cardinal Gibbons with reference to what is commonly designated as "adequate preparedness" are well worth earnest and thoughtful consideration. His world knowledge is vast and comprehensive. His devotion to the highest American ideals is known to every man and woman of intelligence in the United States. In an authorized interview December 2, 1915, Cardinal Gibbons said:

There is no need for America as a Nation to be alarmed or hysterically apprehensive of war. We are the safest Nation on the face of the earth, so far as locality goes. Providence has been kind to us. He has placed us where we are, protected by nature from the incursions of an enemy. On the east we have the ocean barrier of the Atlantic. On the west the Pacific protects us. To the north we have the quiet Canadians. As for the South, there is no danger of an invasion either on the part of Mexico or the South American countries. For this reason I would be sorry to see an immense standing army organized in this country. For one hundred and twenty-odd years we have prospered with a comparatively small army, relying upon the justice of our position for our protection. I do not see why we should be apprehensive at this time—certainly not on account of any European power. They are now well-nigh exhausted, and they certainly would not attack us.

At the close of our great Civil War Gen. Grant, then the foremost soldier of the modern world, approved the muster out of all the Volunteers and reducing our standing army to 25,000 men. There was a powerful and aggressive element in the North clamoring for a war with England. During the war Confederate cruisers, built in English shipyards and armed in English arsenals, had driven American commerce from the seas and oceans of the world, but President Grant favored the Geneva court of arbitration.

Morley, in his life of Gladstone, says:

The treaty of Washington and the Geneva arbitration stand out as the most notable victories in the nineteenth century in the noble art of preventive diplomacy and the most signal exhibition of self-command in two or three of the great powers of the Western World.

At Appomattox Grant stood on fame's topmost pinnacle, the foremost man in all the world, but in the Geneva award he was greater than at Appomattox. [Applause.]

I remember, in 1868, going through the old Ashtabula district of Ohio with Gen. James A. Garfield, afterwards President, then starting on his remarkable civil career. I remember the applause which greeted his peroration in approving the muster-out of that great Army of volunteers, in which he stated that—

We need no large standing army in this country. We are a Republic where every citizen is a beneficiary of the Government. In Europe government rests upon force, and every laboring man is carrying a soldier on his back. In the German Empire the spiked helmet is supreme, but in the United States of America government rests upon the hearts and hands and homes of all the people.

I can not believe that all of Gen. Garfield's splendid idealism is gone. Let us hope not. I hope the time is coming and is near at hand when all this brass-toned hysteria over militarism and ocean domination will cease. When I think of the serenity and virility of American patriotism a half century ago, when great soldiers like Grant and statesmen of the deep humanities like Garfield were the leaders, compared with the truckling servility to organized barbarity now, I feel like quoting a couplet from our own poet, Howard S. Taylor:

We have forgot! A Roman lust
Profanes our ancient holy things.
We trample justice in the dust:
We have the rabies of the kings,
The scarlet rage of gun and sword.
Have mercy on thy people, Lord.

We are to-day at peace with all the world. Why should we prepare for war when we have never had a war in over a century and a quarter of national life that was not of our own seeking? No nation on either side of the Atlantic has ever attacked us when we were numerically weak. How utterly idiotic is the idea that any European nation now, exhausted in fighting men, with business and industry paralyzed, with commerce driven from the seas and oceans of the world; loaded down with a debt that staggers belief, with the land filled with millions of widows and five times as many fatherless children, with 6,000,000 maimed and crippled soldiers—the legless, the armless, the insane, and the sightless, who have escaped from the damp pits of the trenches and the lurid hell of battle—all dependents on the Empire for all their weary lives; that this Empire is going to make an impossible crossing of 3,000 miles of deep ocean with an army that it is impossible to either equip or transport; that this phantom army is going to attack 100,000,000 of people in the United States, between whom there is no quarrel, is the most preposterous proposition that was ever exploited since the cave man of the prehistoric age was in the first stages of evolution. [Laughter.]

We are at peace with all the world. Let us strive, as becomes the citizens of a Christian nation, to make that peace permanent and perpetual. Let us put aside all thoughts of gun and sword as unworthy our traditions and history and look to a future wherein the flag of our shining stars of States shall be a beacon light beckoning our people to peaceful pursuits and social and moral betterment. The great present, with its glowing zeal for humanity, with a culture deepened and broadened by science and enriched by all history, with its strong-winged soul of prophecy hot and glowing with the blood beats a realized brotherhood of man claims us and calls us to stand by the ancient faith. [Applause.]

Let us pray, and labor with our prayers, that this hour of military hysteria will speedily pass, and that the sword and the man on horseback shall never frustrate the true mission and destiny of our beloved America—peace, progress, and prosperity under the supreme guidance of constitutional law. [Applause.]

THE LATE JUSTICE LAMAR.

Mr. TRIBBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for five minutes to announce the death of Mr. Justice Lamar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes on the subject of the death of Mr. Justice Lamar. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRIBBLE. Mr. Speaker, this House, the State of Georgia, and the entire Nation as well have heard with profound sorrow of the death of Justice Lamar. Justice Lamar was born and reared on a farm in Elbert County, in the district I have the honor to represent.

It can be said of him truthfully the high position of judge of the Supreme Court of the United States sought him and that he did not seek the position. He had no political aspirations. He was called from private life to the position of honor he occupied. Before filling the high position on the Supreme Court of the United States he was appointed by the governor of Georgia to the supreme court of that State and was reelected without opposition, but shortly thereafter resigned on account of ill health. He then engaged in the practice of law for a term of years. While sojourning in Augusta, Ga., a few days that great jurist, President Taft, became acquainted with Justice Lamar and the acquaintance ripened into close friendship. President Taft marked him as a man of judicial temperament, judicial mind, and talents. A vacancy occurred on the Supreme Bench, and while President Taft was besieged with many applications from all over the United States through friends of the applicants, his mind went back to Georgia and firmly settled upon this Georgia lawyer. To satisfy his own mind of the competency of Judge Lamar he sent for the Georgia Reports and personally examined decisions rendered by Judge Lamar, thereby satisfying himself overwhelmingly that this Georgia lawyer was the man for the position. President Taft then conferred upon Justice Lamar not only this great honor, but he honored the State of Georgia by laying aside party lines and appointing this great jurist and Democrat. Justice Lamar did not seek the position on the supreme bench of Georgia; the governor appointed him in recognition of his ability. Justice Lamar did not seek the position as Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States; the President of the United States sought Justice Lamar and tendered him the position. Justice Lamar had retired from the bench of Georgia on account of ill health, never intending to return to public life, but he felt duty bound to accept this position voluntarily tendered him by the President of his country.

Justice Lamar served with distinction to himself and honor to the great State of Georgia, which he represented. All men spoke well of Justice Lamar, and no man spoke evil of him. He was a man of great personality and left a strong impress upon all with whom he came in contact. The members of the Georgia bar who knew him loved him, and the same is true of the lawyers who met him in Washington.

During the early spring he had a slight stroke of paralysis, caused by overwork. There was never a more conscientious and hard worker than Justice Lamar. There are no mistakes in his decisions. He never left a case incomplete and no errors can be charged to his record.

It had been his custom to make an annual trip to the old homestead at Ruckersville, and he had shown considerable anxiety to make that trip during the summer of this year. He even went to the extent of announcing to his friends at Ruckersville the date of his anticipated return, but he has not been able to go back to the scenes of his childhood since his illness in the spring.

Two weeks ago, when he returned to Washington from White Sulphur Springs, he was able to return to the Capitol and make short journeys around Washington. He contracted cold and for two weeks he had been gradually sinking, and finally passed away as one falling asleep.

The memory of Justice Lamar will live forever in the history of Georgia and this Nation as one of the greatest jurists of the country, and one who did not seek political preferment but was called on account of his superior ability. Soon his remains will be carried to the South to rest in the old red hills of Georgia, the State he honored and loved so well.

THE LATE GOV. HAMMOND, OF MINNESOTA.

Mr. HENRY and Mr. ELLSWORTH rose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House upon the death of Gov. Winfield Scott Hammond, of Minnesota.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to address the House on the life, character, and death of Gov. Hammond, of Minnesota. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago I heard of the shocking death of the late governor of Minnesota in the Southland. I saw the newspaper accounts of the splendid courtesy that was shown in bringing his remains through Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, and Kentucky under escort of the governors of those Southern States; and as I pictured in my mind's eye, as I could so well, being a native of the little town in which he was buried but yesterday afternoon, the sadness that overtook my native State of Minnesota, and when I realized that as the sun went down yesterday afternoon it was to a million people the saddest day in the history of the State, I felt that some recognition of that event should be had in this Chamber. He served four terms in this body, in the Sixtieth, the Sixty-first, Sixty-second, and Sixty-third Congresses. He was a modest man, and I believe that I state a plain fact when I say that not many, except his old neighbors in his home in southern Minnesota, realized and appreciated the virtues of this truly great man.

As a neighbor he was painstaking, unselfish, generous to a fault; as a man, a patriot, and respecter of the truth; as a citizen, always loyal, patriotic, and public spirited; a lawyer who always tried causes upon their merits, and not a stickler for technicalities. As an official he was ever zealous to perform the duties of his public trust in any and every position which he held. As a political antagonist he was a man whose indignation, once aroused, went out against the opposition and made them feel the very power of his personality and the wisdom of his forceful eloquence; and, when the campaign was over and the turmoil was cleared away, a man who could clasp you by the hand and be the same kind, considerate neighbor that he was in the beginning.

The dominating characteristic, though, was his modesty, and of that particularity I want to speak. He was modest to a fault. The last man in the little town of St. James, a little city of 2,000 people, in the southern part of the State of Minnesota, to assert himself on any public occasion, no matter whether he occupied the humble position of city attorney in the little city or the attorney of the little county, a small county in that part of the State, or Congressman of his district or governor of the State, upon any occasion—Winfield Scott Hammond, if there was a public occasion in the little city or village, was found sitting in the rear with his hands folded, speculating upon some perhaps little inconsiderable part of the event. He was the kind of a man that if you pointed to the sturdy oak, instead of expostulating on its great branches and its rugged roots which protruded from the ground, he would see in it the little tentacles or fibers at the end which took the sap of life; he would see the veins that took the sap into the twigs and leaves and stems—the little things that went to make up the great whole; and such was his life, a man of modest environment, of unpretentious thought, who brought the small things together to make up the great things which made the life he lived.

If I may be permitted time, I will quote one brief sentence, the author of which was a judge and a friend of the late Winfield Scott Hammond, whom he greatly admired. I have often heard him quote it. I do not quote it with any reflection upon his sentiment so far as theology is concerned, but as it reflects his ideal of the kindnesses of everyday life. It is:

A single dog wailed from the summit of St. Bernard bearing a message of hope and sympathy to the weary and benighted is a better exemplar of the teachings of mankind than is the founder of any scholastic theology which can only mystify the soul or paralyze the intellect.

And so in this body, in which he served four terms, I consider it a duty which I perform with a deep sense of sorrow, to say these few words in this Chamber to the memory of Winfield Scott Hammond, the late lamented governor of Minnesota. [Applause.]

Of the many beautiful testimonials to the memory of the late Winfield Scott Hammond, who was an honored Member of this House until the time of his resignation a year ago to assume the duties of governor of his State, I desire to introduce the following by prominent citizens of his State.

By Cyrus Northrop, president emeritus of the University of Minnesota:

[From the Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"He was a splendid type of citizen—splendid in every way. The State has suffered a tremendous loss."

By A. O. Eberhart, former governor:

[From the Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"The death of Gov. Hammond is a loss to the entire community. He was a man of exceptional ability and gave the State a good administration. Gov. Hammond did not play to the gallery. He did what he thought best for the State at all times."

By Fred B. Snyder, president university board of regents:

[From the Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"The death of Gov. Hammond is a great loss to the State and to the university. The more I saw of the governor the better I liked him. He was a Democrat in politics, but he was a nonpartisan governor. I considered him one of the ablest men the State of Minnesota ever had in the executive chair."

By Charles M. Andrist, secretary to the late governor:

[From the Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"Mr. Hammond was the best friend I had. I can not express my grief in mere words. He was one of the cleanest cut men in his public acts I have ever known. His decisions were based on whether a proposition was right or wrong and never as to whether it was expedient or inexpedient. He was one of the most lovable of men."

By Hon. JAMES R. MANN, minority leader of the House:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"I had a great personal admiration for the governor and his death moves me deeply. He was a fair fighter at all times and wise in council and debate. Minnesota has suffered a great loss; so has the country at large. It is a pity that such a man should have been stricken in the flower of his manhood."

By Senator OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"I am greatly shocked to hear of Mr. Hammond's death. He was an ideal Representative and performed excellent service as a Member of the House. As a member of the Ways and Means Committee I knew him well and had great respect for his judgment on public questions."

By Senator MOSES E. CLAPP:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"Coming so suddenly, Gov. Hammond's death was a great shock to all of us and has plunged us in grief. Our acquaintance dates to the time when he was practicing law in St. James, before he became a candidate for Congress, and our relations as members of the same profession were always pleasant. When he came to this House we were thrown still more together, and I came to regard him as a man of sterling worth. He was very able, deliberate in his judgment, and of high character and integrity."

By Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, Dec. 31, 1915.]

"I knew Gov. Hammond well, and had respect for his good common sense, his poise, and the deliberative judgment that he brought to bear in the consideration of public questions. He was a fine type of American, a faithful public servant, and a loyal friend."

A few days before the late governor left for his last earthly trip to the Southland, in answer to a request for a Christmas expression by Miss Carrie E. Eppley, superintendent of Hopewell Hospital, in Minneapolis, he wrote the following reply, which is so thoroughly characteristic of the man that I offer it here:

Letter to superintendent of Hopewell Hospital:

[From the Minneapolis Tribune, Jan. 2, 1916.]

"DEAR MISS EPPLEY: Each has his burdens to bear. The more cheerfully they are carried the brighter they seem to be. How fortunate it is that we may always hope for a to-morrow brighter and happier than to-day. Troubles may disappear. Business may be better. The sick again may be strong. The distressed may have relief. Hope makes one cheerful, and cheerfulness aids us in getting over the rough places in life."

"God is good. He has given us the right to hope for better days in this world and assurance of the happiest days in the world to come. Christmas is the anniversary of Him who has given the children of earth their greatest joy and dearest hope, the Apostle of Love and Sunshine, foe of hate and gloom. Let us all rejoice that on this day, centuries ago, Christ was born. May His loving-kindness rest upon the patients of Hopewell Hospital and bring them joy on this Christmas day and assure them of a happy, bright New Year."

Yours, very truly,

"WINFIELD S. HAMMOND."

I submit, also, a resolution by the Minnesota delegation in Congress, passed on January 4, 1916.

The Members of the Minnesota delegation in Congress having heard of the recent death of Gov. Winfield Scott Hammond, met and adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we express our sincere and profound sorrow at the sudden death of Gov. Hammond. Having known and associated with him, his death is a personal loss to all of us. In his official life he was a man of the highest character, faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties. In his private life he was modest, kind, and considerate to others. He deserved and earned the highest regard and esteem of all who knew him. His death in the prime of his power and usefulness is a distinct loss to the State and Nation he loved so well.

Resolved further, That we tender to the relatives of the deceased our deepest sympathy in this their hour of bereavement.

F. F. ELLSWORTH.

C. A. LINDBERGH.

T. D. SCHALL.

He was a modest man, a true friend, an able lawyer, a conscientious official, and an able statesman.

His death is a deep sorrow to his adopted city, a shock to the great State of Minnesota, and took from the great political party to which he was so loyally devoted the prospect of a new leader in the Nation's wide sphere.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMS). The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I desire to congratulate the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ELLSWORTH] on the beautiful and admirable speech which he just delivered. The House of Representatives, according to my judgment, is one of the strictest critics in the world, and at the same time it is one of the most generous. I do not believe there is any place on earth where a man reaches his true level more quickly than in the House of Representatives.

There is not a man who served with Gov. Hammond who does not sincerely regret his death.

None knew him but to love him;

None named him but to praise.

He came here under very peculiar circumstances and he died in a peculiar situation. He came from a district that is strongly Republican. He was preceded by a Republican, and he was succeeded by a Republican. He died as governor of a State that has anywhere from 40,000 to 80,000 Republican majority in it. The fact that he achieved these great stations so universally coveted by men is a complete demonstration of the fact that he was worthy of them. He achieved high position here, was on the great Committee on Ways and Means, and served his country and his district faithfully and well. His history is one of the valuable assets not only of the State of Minnesota but of the American Republic.

Since I have been here, now 21 years, I have served in this House with a multitude of governors, a few ex-governors, but most of them when they were here were future governors. The State of Maine has a habit of sending her ex-governors to the House of Representatives. That is the only State that has that habit. I have always said, and I say now, that one of the most valuable things that comes to a man in public life here is the personal friendships which he forms. We may be defeated hereafter and retired to private life, and whatever glories we have attained here may fade from the public mind, and probably will, but the recollection of the personal friendships abides with us always. I am glad that the big aisle is not a line of demarcation between friends. [Applause.]

Accident determines very largely our associates here and elsewhere. Accident first brought me into close communion with Gov. Hammond, on account of a very gracious act which he performed. In the old time, when we drew for seats, I was extremely lucky. The first House that I served in I was the first Democrat to draw a seat, and in the next two Houses that I served in I drew high enough up to get within the central block of seats. The next House I served in I was again the first Democrat to draw a seat. The sixth time, coming up on the street car the morning the House was to be organized, I told my wife that on the doctrine of probabilities I ought to be the last Member in the House to draw a seat, and I was next to the last. The astronomer Proctor figured it out once—and he was a great astronomer—that when playing poker a man would hold a royal straight flush only once out of a million hands. On the same doctrine of probabilities a man ought not to have drawn the first seat on his side more than once in any service in this House shorter than that of my venerable friend, Mr. Speaker CANNON. So on the sixth occasion when Mr. Hammond was here the first time I had to take a seat away back yonder on the outside rim. He drew so high up that he selected the seat that is right where the end of the table now is on the Democratic side, and, by the way, that was the best seat in the House. He came to me—I had never seen him or been introduced to him—and he said, "You have a great deal to do here and I am a new Member and will not have very much to do, and I want to swap seats with you." That was, as I said, a gracious and kindly act, and I never forgot it.

Minnesota has been unfortunate in one thing; that is, the Democrats of Minnesota. Within a comparatively recent time they have elected two governors. They elected Gov. Johnson three times. He was not a bad chance for being President of the United States, and if he had lived that third term out I am not at all certain that he would not have been now in the White House. From the peculiar circumstances under which Gov. Hammond lived and the high position that he attained, he was not a bad chance for President sometime if he had lived the Psalmist's allotment. Of course death comes to us all, but I have philosophized time and again a good deal about when men die. It is strange to me that a man in the very flower of his years, as Gov. Hammond was, a little past 50, a strong useful man, of high capacity, of power to serve his country with ability, should be taken and so many others who are not of very much account in the world should be left behind. But such things must be. While the House of Representatives can not in the very nature of things adjourn out of respect for the memory of all the former Congressmen who die, I think it is eminently fitting and proper that these exercises should take place in behalf of one of the ablest, most amiable, and most modest men with whom I have been associated in the 21 years I have been here. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, we have all heard with profound regret of the death of the distinguished governor of Minnesota, who for eight years was a Member of this body. During the entire period of his service here I knew him intimately and well, and was closely connected with his activities as a Member of Congress.

I take this opportunity to pay this tribute of respect to the memory of my friend.

He was a modest, quiet, cultured gentleman, and at the same time a strong, forceful man of action. In all the emergencies of life he discharged his full duty to his community, his State, and his country.

Winfield Scott Hammond was born 53 years ago in the State of Massachusetts and spent in New England the years of his childhood and his young manhood. He was splendidly educated in an old-fashioned, conservative New England college. When he attained his majority he went to the great State in which he spent the mature years of his life. He brought with him the culture and conservatism of New England to aid him in his work in the great progressive northwest section of the United States. He there had presented to him the splendid possibilities of usefulness which open up always before educated young men of talent and ability in that section of the United States. He earned at once the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens and he retained it until the very last. The high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him best is evidenced by the fact that although he was a Democrat with opinions fixed and unchangeable, he was elected to Congress four times from a district strongly Republican. Just before the expiration of his service here, after he had stood for seven years in the limelight and after, as a member of the Ways and Means Committee, he had rendered valuable aid and assistance in the construction of the Democratic revenue measure now in operation, he was elected governor of Minnesota, a State which can always be considered one of the Republican States of the Union. Such honors as this rarely come to a man on this earth.

He was for years a member of the great committee of this House on which I have the honor to serve—the Ways and Means Committee—to which has been delegated the task of preparing the several revenue measures which in recent years have passed the House, and of preparing the tariff bill now in force. During the long hearings and deliberations which preceded the reporting out of these tariff bills the members of the committee, whether they agreed with him or not, learned to respect and to honor him. We learned early that while he was a man of strong convictions he was always ready to yield to evidence and to argument and was conscientious in the discharge of every duty. He was, in all emergencies and at all times, an honest man, and no greater compliment can be paid to the memory of a man than this.

He died when for him the sun still stood high in the heavens, when he was still in all the vigor of manhood, and when his mental powers were at their very best. He died far from home in the pleasant Southland, and when his body commenced its long journey back to his home in the colder North, with splendid chivalry the governors of the great States through which his remains passed acted as a bodyguard, and his remains were tenderly conveyed across State boundaries and over great rivers back to the home he loved and to the people who loved him. To-day his remains rest under the snow in the State he loved.

He leaves to his family and to his friends a record of accomplishments extending throughout the years of his life.

May the snows of winter lie soft on his last resting place; may the winds of winter blow light over his grave; may the birds sing there their sweetest songs through the long, sunny summer days to come.

Kind, loyal, faithful friend, farewell!

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman is accorded five minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the distinguished Speaker of this House, who is loved on both sides of the House equally well, has already referred this afternoon to the personal friendships which are formed in the House between Members, regardless of parties. The new Members of the House can not yet understand the personal relations which exist between men who in the open meet only in combat. It is, I think, the saving quality of the American people that they make their political issues on principles, and after a political fight is over and one side or the other has won and men have been elected to offices of responsibility they retain personal friendly relations. That is not the case everywhere in the world. Last spring I went with a party to Hawaii. Mrs. Mann and I spent some time in California and returned home about the 1st of July, where I met a large number of invitations on my desk to go out and make addresses in many different places, perhaps undoubtedly because some misguided people in the world had the notion that they might be hearing a future President or candidate for the presidency. [Laughter and applause.] I had resolved to decline all of these, because I had made up my mind to take a rest last summer. Among the invitations which I received was one from the State Bar Association of Minnesota. I wrote a letter declining; but later, in going over the papers, I received a communication from Gov. Hammond asking me to accept this invitation, and because I had formed such a high idea of Gov. Hammond and had become so friendly personally with him in the House that was the only invitation at that time which I accepted, because I wanted to show to him that I did have for him a warm, affectionate feeling as well as a high personal regard. And it was a great pleasure to me when I learned of his leaving us for the other world to know that I had so felt toward him and, as I believe, every other Member in the House had felt toward him who knew him. It was a great loss to the House when he left us to become governor of Minnesota. It was a great loss to the country when he was called hence. [Applause.]

RURAL CREDITS.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to address the House for 20 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, it is gratifying to realize that the Congress is about to legislate on the subject of rural credits. There are millions of homeless and landless people throughout this country who will hail with delight the information that the American Congress is now to consider this great problem.

In my judgment it is the greatest economic question Congress has dealt with for more than 40 years.

Mr. Speaker, on July 22, 1915, it was my privilege to say in a statement to the Texas people that this Congress should enact rural-credits legislation and that it should be bottomed upon certain principles. As outlined then, I reiterate them to-day.

The Baltimore platform, declaring that rural-credits legislation is of equal importance to the reformation of our currency laws, Democracy should immediately redeem that promise. Having studied the question for many months, I suggest legislation upon substantially these principles.

Provide for organizing national farm loan associations, with Federal charters and Government aid, of not less than five farmers, in certain districts throughout the United States for the purpose of making long-time loans on farm lands and at a rate of interest not to exceed 6 per cent per annum, for the purpose of improving farm lands already acquired and for enabling tenants and those without homes to purchase and improve farms and broad acres. These associations should be federated in 12 Federal land banks, corresponding substantially to the 12 Federal reserve banks. The details should be worked out under the "Amortization plan" so as to allow these mortgages to run for periods of time ranging from 5 to 35 or more years, and should permit paying off present farm incumbrances of more than $5,000,000,000 so as to reduce interest rate and burdens. And as members of the Federal land banks these associations should be allowed to use the farm mortgages as collateral with said land banks for the purpose of converting them into cash and as the basis for farm loan bonds or debentures.

TWELVE FEDERAL LAND BANKS.

The Government should authorize the establishment of 12 Federal land banks, with a capital stock of not less than $500,000 each, for the purpose of buying mortgages from the land associations and of raising the capital therefore by issuing farm loan bonds or debentures.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITS IN THE FEDERAL LAND BANKS.

The law should allow the Secretary of the Treasury to deposit in the Federal land banks one-half of the general fund held in the Treasury of the United States in order that such banks may use this Government money to securely establish and maintain this rural credits system. The credit of the Government should be furnished in this and other ways in abundant measure to place the farmers' banking machinery upon the surest foundation. The commercial banking act is saturated with Government aid. The Government should subscribe for the stock of the Federal land banks, provided the subscriptions of farm-loan associations and other subscribers are not sufficient.

It should be provided that the Government credit and funds are placed behind these banks in abundant fashion. The Federal Government should obligate itself to purchase each year $50,000,000 or more of these farm-loan bonds. It should come squarcly to the aid of these banks, and even guarantee all their bonds.

SEPARATE AND DISTINCT SYSTEM FOR FARMERS.

A farm-loan board should be created in the Treasury Department at Washington analogous to the Federal Reserve Board and endowed with substantially the same powers. This system should be entirely separate and distinct from the Federal reserve act. State institutions should be allowed to enter the system. These are the essential and fundamental points of the legislation I shall advocate.

By this method let us make it possible for farmers to lighten their burdens and for the millions of worthy and homeless men, tenants, and laborers to acquire farms and pay for them under the "Amortization plan," in periods running from five to thirty-five or more years, at a very low rate of interest and in no event to exceed 6 per cent per annum. In this way we guarantee homes for the homeless and lands for the landless. And thus we can put upon the uncultivated lands in Texas, amounting to 100,000,000 acres, sturdy farmers and home builders.

FOR THE RELIEF OF THE COTTON GROWERS AND FARMERS.

The principle of bills introduced by me for the relief of cotton growers is correct, and I defend those measures.

In addition to what the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board have ample authority for doing now to finance the cotton crop, the things proposed by me last year should have been adopted by Congress.

Under conditions brought on by the European war the Government should have deposited in the national banks of the South funds to be advanced to the producers of cotton at a low rate of interest for one year or longer. For such purpose redeemable United States notes could be issued or Panama Canal bonds could be sold and the proceeds added to such notes to bring such funds up to an adequate amount. I insist that the Secretary of the Treasury should have deposited these moneys as a trust fund to be loaned to the cotton growers, as he did when he sent to New York City banks on August 2 last year $40,000,000, with much larger sums on subsequent days, aggregating $140,000,000, to steady the stock market on Wall Street. The cotton can always be pledged at its market value and thus become the best-known security for the loans. The Government in this war crisis should do this with free and lavish hand. In July, 1915, my position was as outlined above.

1915 COTTON CROP SAVED—SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY USES THE POWER AS SUGGESTED.

Mr. Speaker, in line with these contentions the Secretary of the Treasury in 1915 deposited in the Federal reserve banks of the South Government funds and provided for financing the cotton crop and enabling farmers to hold it. The Federal Reserve Board established its commodity rate and made it possible for the member banks to rediscount paper based on cotton warehouse receipts and to loan money to the cotton farmers at a rate of interest not exceeding 6 per cent. The value of the cotton crop was preserved, and the fate befalling the farmers in 1914 by the paralysis of the cotton market was averted. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board deserve the gratitude of the southern people and are receiving it. It was my good fortune last August to urge this exact course upon those officials in accordance with my promises, and I am grateful in finding myself in precise accord with the course pursued by our Government.

SECRETARY McADOO TAKES PRIDE IN DEPOSITING CROP FUNDS—1915 ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

In his annual report just out, speaking of the cotton crop, Mr. McAdoo said:

I am led to believe that the Government's action had a happy effect upon the situation; that it contributed to the immediate restoration of confidence, prevented demoralization, and was a potential factor in the steady rise in the value of cotton from between 8 and 9 cents a pound at which it was then selling, to between 11 and 12 cents a pound, at which it is now selling.

In 1914 for many months I contended that such course would save millions of dollars to Southern farmers. The Secretary of the Treasury by his wise action preserved the value of the crop of 1915, and I congratulate and thank him for 30,000,000 of Southern people.

In August, 1915, by special visit to Washington as a Representative from Texas I had the honor to urge this exact course upon the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Board.

MY RURAL CREDITS BILL INTRODUCED AT THE BEGINNING OF THIS CONGRESS.

Mr. Speaker, in further pursuance with my statement and promises I have just introduced a rural credits bill providing for long-time loans on farm lands, with the maximum interest rate of 6 per cent, to be paid off under the "Amortization plan."

An analysis of the bill shows that it provides the way of bringing the "landless man" to the proud proprietorship of the soil. It points the way to the ownership of homes for the millions of tenants and landless in Texas and the other States. It provides for purchasing and improving homesteads and improving those already purchased. Its distinct features are as follows:

Provision is made for a farm-loan board, including a farm-loan commissioner to direct this rural credits system. An abundance of power is conferred on this board in conformity with the principles set forth in the Federal reserve act and as provided for in the proposed ship-purchase board. There is specific provision for organizing national farm-loan associations, with Federal charters, endowed with abundant powers for making loans on farm lands at a low rate of interest, based upon farm mortgages, as the initial units of the system. All this is in conformity with my views above set forth touching these loan associations.

In certain sections provision is made for creating 12 Federal land banks, decreeing that the Federal Government shall take stock in these banks under certain circumstances. These farm-loan associations are federated into 12 land banks, which correspond substantially with the 12 Federal reserve banks. Provision is made allowing mortgages to run for periods ranging from 5 to 35 years and to be paid off under the "Amortization plan." This will enable paying off present farm incumbrances of more than $5,000,000,000. The Federal land banks are authorized to purchase mortgages from the farm-loan associations and to issue debenture bonds upon said mortgages.

Further on there is provision for depositing one-half of the public funds held in the Treasury of the United States in the 12 Federal land banks. Authority for such deposits is given in section 14 of this bill as introduced. In section 31 there is abundant provision for Government aid. The Federal Government is authorized to purchase as much as $100,000,000 in any one year of the farm-loan bonds issued upon farm mortgages. Here in bounteous measure Government aid is extended to the farmers as it has been accorded to the commercial world in the Federal reserve act; and upon the same terms, in the same way, and on identically the same principle the farmers with equal cost may secure funds from the Government mint through this rural-credits system.

Mr. Speaker, I shall insist that the Government purchase as many as $100,000,000 of these bonds in any year and that the credit of the Government shall be placed behind this system by guaranteeing all the farm-loan bonds issued by any and all the Federal land banks. In this way we set up a system with life and vigor in it that will sustain itself and put the farmers upon an exact footing with the commercial and business world already provided for in the Federal reserve act. For a system based on these great principles I shall continue to contend in this Congress. Let no man think that a rural-credits law not entirely divorced from the commercial banking system and filled to the fullest measure with Government aid will satisfy the farming population of America. Their demand is just and should be obeyed. For one, I raise their standard and shall fight to the end of the conflict with the earnest belief that their day of victory is at hand under Democratic administration.

Mr. Speaker, when the commercial world demanded an asset currency and said they desired the credit of this Government behind the great banking interests of America, we served notice on them that the day would soon come when the tillers of the soil, who make this country great, prosperous, and happy, would knock at the doors of Congress and demand a system of rural credits in behalf of agriculture. That day has come. The commercialist can take his assets—his mere paper merchandise—to the Federal reserve banks and have Federal reserve notes exchanged for them in any amount consistent with the 40 per cent gold reserve requirement. And now we say mortgages on the rich acres of soil in this country are a better security. It is high time for the farmer to come to the Government and secure money on the same terms on which we are issuing it to the commercial world. Therefore, I shall stand in this House until the contest is ended and in my humble way insist that the United States Government shall guarantee farm-loan bonds based on farm mortgages, and purchase $100,000,000 or more of them every year. I know there are good men who stand here and fear to raise their voices in behalf of the farming population because they dread the stigma of being called "demagogues." Many good men are swayed in their attitude in that respect because they dread criticism. So far as I am concerned, my course is fixed, and whether the stigma of demagoguery is placed on my name or not, I enlist on the side of the man who tills the soil, and shall press forward in this contest until it is settled in their behalf. [Applause.]
